Actor Gil Gerard with Princess Margaret at Rolls site

'Lord Louis suspect' foiled in L.A.

Times News Services

LOS ANGELES — An Irish Republican Army terrorist — a suspect in the killing of Lord Louis Mountbatten — stalked Princess Margaret when she visited Los Angeles last week, triggering a massive, secret operation to guard her, it was reported today.

A tip from Scotland yard that the gunman was in the city sent law enforcement officers from both nations into "a controlled frenzy" on Oct. 17 just 27 hours before Princess Margaret's jet landed, the Los Angeles Times said.

Security efforts redoubled when officers of the Los Angeles police intelligence unit discovered the potential assassin was trying to obtain a floor plan of a Rolls-Royce dealership where the princess was scheduled to dedicate a new service facility, the Times reported.

The IRA man, not publicly identified, and two accomplices apparently realized security forces were on their trail and escaped.

He was described by Scotland Yard as "a high-ranking member of the IRA" provisional wing, and "a suspect in the August boat-bombing murder of Lord Mountbatten," the princess's uncle, the newspaper reported.

A West Los Angeles motor inn was the suspect's headquarters for a week, and a two-man movie crew was recruited as an innocent, unknowing cover. The assassination site appeared to be a Rolls-Royce service facility in nearby Culver City, Calif., which Princess Margaret dedicated Friday.

Capt. Larry Kramer, commander of the police department's security operations for the visit, theorizes now that the IRA agent and his local accomplice learned that word of their plans had leaked and aborted their attempt on Princess Margaret, then hurriedly left California.

Kramer said the intelligence, passed to him from Scotland Yard by the State Department, named and described the suspected assassin, and a routine check of local police records showed that the man had been in Los Angeles before. His police file here yielded a vital photograph.

Last Wednesday, Tony Thompson, president of Rolls-Royce of Beverly Hills, told Walt Deering, assistant agent-in charge of State Department security in Los Angeles, that he had received an odd call from a person who said he represented a movie company assigned by Rolls-Royce to film Princess Margaret's visit to the facility. The caller asked Thompson for a floor plan of his new building.

Thompson referred his caller to Jerry Pam, a Beverly Hills public relations man representing the company, who told the man that anybody attending the Rolls-Royce reception would have to be accredited by the British Consulate-General or cleared by the State Department.

When the film company representative called the State Department, a meeting was set up to discuss "the movie." Police intelligence officers kept that date.

The man who had made the phone calls and a business associate were able to prove that they were legitimate, albeit new, movie producers.

Two weeks earlier, they explained to officers, they met a man in a Beverly Hills bar who said he was representing an international film-maker who wanted to shoot a documentary of Princess Margaret's visit to the Rolls-Royce facility.

They agreed on a price and, at the man's request, said they would obtain a floor plan or a sketch of the service area to guide the positioning of lights and cameras.

The film-makers named the motel in West Los Angeles where their contact was staying.

Motel employees told police that the man and a male companion had checked out Tuesday, the day before Princess Margaret's arrival. From photographs, Kramer said motel employees "positively identified" the companion as the IRA suspect.

Kramer now believes the IRA agent and his accomplice aborted their plan after learning of contacts between the State Department and the film-makers. But at the time there was no proof that the would-be assassin had not simply switched hideouts or swung to a backup plan.

So the planned small motorcades during the royal visit were strengthened to include 13 motorcycle officers and 11 cars, a helicopter constantly patrolled overhead, the reception at the Rolls-Royce dedication was moved indoors and Princess Margaret used a bulletproof Cadillac instead of a promotional Rolls as planned.

In Dublin, meanwhile, Irish Justice Minister Gerard Collins said Tuesday that the outlawed Irish Republican Army has links with Italy's Red Brigades and West Germany's Baader-Meinhof gang.

Collins spoke with reporters after presiding at a meeting attended by justice ministers of the nine-member European Common Market.

He said he had chosen his words carefully and declined to elaborate on what evidence the the ministers have of such links.

Secret study urges major pension rise

MONTREAL (CP) — A confidential government study recommends a major boost in Canadian pensions, according to a story in Le Devoir.

Increases in old age security and income supplements should be tied to increases in average earnings in the country, the newspaper says in a front-page report today from Ottawa.

The study recommends pensions should pay 40 to 45 per cent of the national average salary of $14,000. It says pensioners are currently paid an average 34 per cent ($4,810) of the average salary.

The cost of tying old age security and income supplement payments to salary increases is estimated at $100 million.

Another $200 million would go to new benefits for single people over 65 years old who live in poverty.

The newspaper says the study, prepared by the finance and health and welfare departments, recommends that either pensions be made compulsory for all businesses or that government pension plans be enlarged.

It says only half the employees in the private sector currently pay into private pension plans.

The study also recommends employers be obliged periodically to re-adjust pensions to former employees based on earnings of pension fund investments. It says employees should be able to withdraw pension fund contributions, including those of the company, earlier.

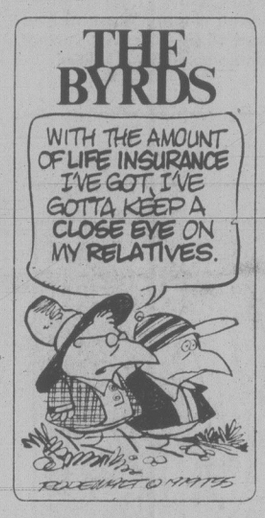
Interest rate hike coming?

OTTAWA (CP) — Sinclair Stevens, treasury board president, indicated today that interest rates could rise following the increase Tuesday in the prime rate of several United States banks.

"This brings added pressure in a North American sense on our interest rates and we can't give assurance that interest rates will not be going higher in Canada," Stevens said in the Commons.

Canadian interest rates are already at record levels. Several American banks announced Tuesday that they are raising their prime lending rate to 15 per cent. This is the rate at which money is loaned to banks' most creditworthy customers.

Stevens' statement was prompted by Herb Gray, Liberal finance critic, who demanded that the government promise further interest rate increases will not occur.



Bennett orders new look

By PAUL NICHOLSON

Premier Bill Bennett today instructed the Environment and Land Use Committee of cabinet to reconsider its controversial decision to remove 626 acres of Langley land from the Agricultural Land Reserve.

Bennett said today the ELUC will hold a special meeting Nov. 5 to review the application.

In the meantime, the land will remain frozen, Bennett said.

The ELUC overruled the Agricultural Land Commission in July and allowed the Langley land out of the reserve for use as an industrial park.

The exemption was sought by Gloucester Properties and Chichester Properties, joint developers in the venture.

Their application to the land commission to have the land freed was refused, but the companies later appealed directly to the ELUC and it granted their request.

Since that decision, the government has faced growing criticism from several municipalities and from a wide range of provincial organizations over the way the appeal was handled.

Bennett said if the ELUC decision was correct, those involved need not fear re-examination.

Asked why he decided on the action today, Bennett would only say: "The government is always willing to take a second look at its decision."

He pointed out the review won't necessarily change the decision, but the ELUC will take a fresh look at it without prejudicing the case.

The earlier decision by cabinet lead to the resignation of the acting chairman of the land commission, Gary Runka.

Later, seven major but diverse organizations ranging from the B.C. Federation of Agriculture to the Planning Institute of B.C. and the B.C. Chamber of Commerce issued a joint press release protesting the appeal procedure where ELUC meeting in secret can overrule decisions of the land commission.

Weather outlook fuels ops-strike safety fear

Concern about air safety mounted today — not least in plane-crash-prone British Columbia — as the full-scale national radio operators entered its second day.

There have been at least 40 separate incidents in Western Canada involving air safety since radio operators went on strike, the Public Service Alliance of Canada (PSAC) said Tuesday.

The union also said there had been numerous reports of air regulation infractions, including pilots taking off in the dark.

In Quesnel, a pilot was forced to land in the dark at his own risk because airport lights were not turned on. He was carrying a patient needing medical treatment.

The radio operators are responsible for flight planning, weather and navigation aids and operations in control towers when controllers are off duty.

They are vital to smaller airports where pilots depend on them for landing and take-off information.

About 1,200 air and marine radio operators went on a full-scale strike across the country Tuesday after more than a week of rotating walkouts to back contract demands. Of these, 206 operators are stationed in B.C.

Talks between federal government negotiators and the union resumed briefly Tuesday for the first time since June. More talks were expected this week.

Unsettled fall weather was the big worry in B.C., where the weather information relayed by radio ops is especially vital to navigation.

Gale warnings were posted for Georgia Strait today with wind and rain expected along the coast for the next few days.

CP Air and Pacific Western Airlines, said Tuesday flights to Quesnel, Terrace, Prince Rupert and Watson lake had been cancelled.

Earnings up 62% for M-B

VANCOUVER (CP) — MacMillan Bloedel Ltd. announced Tuesday its earnings in the first nine months of 1979 totalled $118.3 million, up 62 per cent from the $72.9 million earned in the same period a year ago.

The return is $5.37 a common share, compared with $3.25 a share in 1978.

Company president Calvert Knudsen made the announcement in a Toronto speech in which he said earnings in the third quarter were hurt by strikes and hit-and-run walkouts in British Columbia and a lengthy strike at the MacMillan Rothesay newsprint mill in Saint John, N.B.

In B.C., a new forest industry contract was settled in the third quarter without a major shutdown but all of the company's mills in the province were shut down at one time or another due to picketing by a small number of employees.

Third-quarter earnings amounted to $27.8 million,, compared with $28.8 million a year ago.

Knudsen said all B.C. facilities are now back in operation.

Judge finds jail a cold, cold place

BURNABY (CP) — A judge who spent two days last week living like a convict in Oakalla prison describes the jail as a cold, hostile place which is not likely to rehabilitate offenders.

Judge Cunliffe Barnett of Williams Lake, who spent his time in the maximum security remand at the suburban Vancouver prison, called the institution hopelessly outdated, old and dirty.

He and magistrate Roger Kimmerly of Whitehorse went into the prison on an invitation extended by the corrections department during a seminar of provincial court judges. Kimmerly was placed among the general prison population.

"It is a cold, hostile environment," said Barnett. "I think you could go in there completely clean and come out with an intense dislike for authority in a short space of time."

Barnett stressed that he is not advocating the closure of all jails but said that the Oakalla institution has no part in the corrections system today.

He said it is often heard that judges send people to jail to be rehabilitated.

"When you get inside you see it is not an environment where this is going to happen," said Barnett. "Everything that happens is going in the other direction.

"For one thing, that's just not likely to happen in an atmosphere as tense as hostile as Oakalla's."

Barnett said he found it frightening that he discovered himself disliking the relationship between the prisoners and their guards.

He added that he was not faulting the guards, but that it was the atmosphere of the jail.

He said he now has a clearer picture of what prisons are like.

Although prisons are a difficult place to work, Barnett said he found morale among the correctional staff "surprisingly high."

But the impersonal and dehumanizing atmosphere must eventually have an effect on the guards who were in charge of a difficult group of prisoners in maximum security, he said.

One of the worst features was that prisoners have little to do and walk about like caged animals "building up emotions that are bound to erupt."

Barnett said prisoners must find something to occupy their time.

The judge said while in the remand centre he confronted someone he knew.

"I put him there."

The man looked at him, seemed surprised, and then asked: "What did you do?"

Now it's $10 parking tags

Motorists nailed for parking illegally as of today will pay a stiff price.

Fines for motorists who park their cars in a number of restricted zones in the city of Victoria went up to $10 from $3.

Anyone who leaves his vehicle illegally in zones marked exclusively for residential parking, trucks, bus stops, hotels, taxis, safety zones near corner and next to hooded parking meters is also liable to have his car towed away.

Fines for this offence used to be $3 but the city traffic department said it wasn't deterring motorists from illegal parking, and the problem had become so severe it was causing extensive double parking in the downtown core.

Trucks, buses and construction vehicles couldn't get into their special zones and had to stop in the street, causing critical congestion and hazards to pedestrians and traffic.

The $3 tickets issued for "yellow line infractions" — parking next to yellow-painted curbs — also climbed to $10 today.

Driveways were being blocked downtown and drivers' visibility obstructed because of this form of illegal parking, the department said.

NELSON (CP) — Jack Davis and Dorene Gray, Jack Barber, Wesley Carter and Liz Fowler all have something in common.

So do W. Fraser, I. Arthur and R. J. Richardson.

None of them exist, at least not at the addresses given on political letters sent to the Nelson Daily News before last May's provincial election.

As far as the morning newspaper in this Kootenay community can discover, all are fictitious names. So apparently are John Rand, Cam Anderson, Irene Buchanan and Margaret Dunwoody.

The 12 names were signed to letters to the editor favoring Social Credit policies or criticizing the New Democratic Party.

They are the latest in a growing list of apparently phoney letters to the editor which have surfaced since it became known that a Socred caucus researcher advised party members to write such letters. Cassette tapes of the meeting where the comments were made were distributed at party gatherings before the election campaign.

Two researchers were recorded as suggesting such strategies: Jack Kelly has resigned; Ellen MacKay was told to extend her vacation when she returned last week from a visit to Europe.

The RCMP has been asked to investigate the possible forgeries and any other crimes connected with the "dirty tricks" affair now being called Lettergate.

The police investigation will include letters published in Nanaimo, Victoria, Vancouver and Nelson.

Premier Bill Bennett, who earlier said he would rid the party of the elements and attitudes responsible for such practices, said Tuesday he will not comment until the police have something substantial to report.

A check of the Nelson newspaper's files showed the 13 letters gave addresses in Nelson and nearby Salmo and Harrop. However, no listings were found in the telephone directory or on the voters' list and the post office has no record of any of them.

The newspaper also is investigating two letters supporting the NDP because their authors cannot be traced through telephone books or voters' lists.

NDP incumbent Lorne Nicolson won in the Nelson-Creston riding. Nelson alderman Hank Colemen, who ran for the Socreds, was second.

"I have no knowledge of anyone writing phoney letters to the editor," Coleman said Tuesday. "We received tapes from Vancouver but I never sat through and listened to a whole tape. We did not use them. We even erased them for our own use."

Meanwhile, the president of the B.C. and Yukon Community Newspapers Association said Tuesday the dirty tricks and phoney letters to the editor campaign has undermined a basic freedom of British Columbians.

Dennis Stanley, publisher of the Arrow Lake News in Nakusp, said the entire issue stinks.

"Members of the Social Credit party are supposed to be defenders of freedom and free enterprise," Stanley said in a telephone interview, "and here they are undermining one of the basic freedons of free access to letters to the editor."

Wife worth $64,892

VANCOUVER (CP) — A Coquitlam man has been awarded $64,892 for the loss of his wife who was killed when the car she was driving was crushed by an earth-moving machine.

Mr. Justice D. R. Verchere said Tuesday in B.C. Supreme Court that in assessing the loss suffered by Karl-Heinz Heldt through the death of his wife, Ruth, who was a devoted and industrious wife and mother, he should go to the upper range of awards and beyond it because of the decline in the value of money.

Heldt, who lives with his five children, sued under the Families Compensation Act, alleging negligence on the part of Jack Cewe Ltd., who rented the earth mover, Ginger Holdings Ltd., owners and operator Brian David Gibson.

The accident occurred Aug. 31, 1977. Mr. Justice Verchere ruled that Gibson was negligent and the other defendants were liable for the consequences of Gibson's behavior.

He awarded $45,000 to Heldt, plus $17,500 to be divided among the children and $6,492 to cover special damages and wage loss.

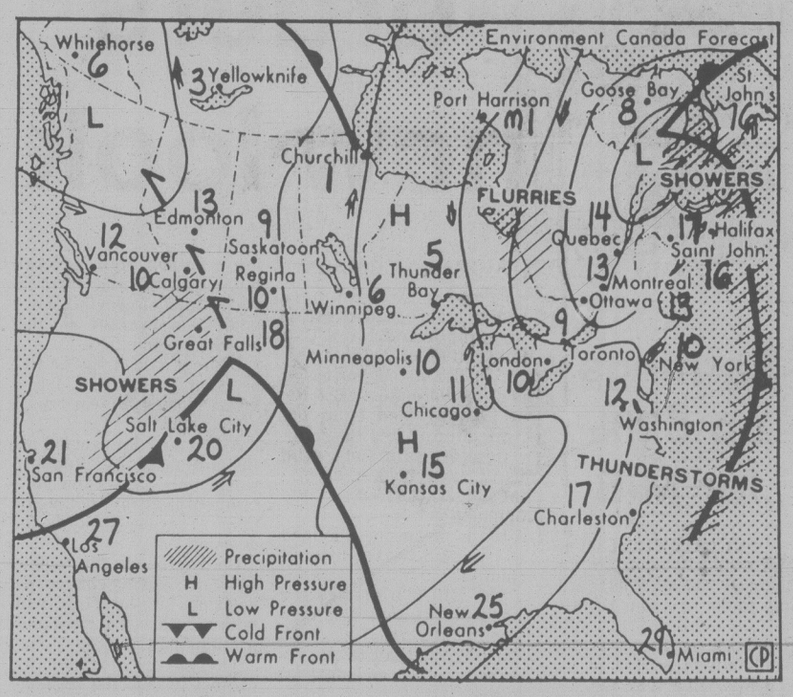

Map valid until noon Thursday

A deep trough of low pressure remained off the coast overnight allowing a small ridge to build over the interior and providing clear skies in some areas. A frontal system off the Washington-Oregon coast is moving towards the south coast while a second front stretching southwards from the Gulf of Alaska is also moving towards B.C. The first front will have brought rain to the south coast earlier today with the second reaching the coast by this evening. Both fronts will move inland but very slowly. Because many weather observations are unavailable, Environment Canada forecasts are based on incomplete information.

Zambian guerrilla base hit

Times News Services

SALISBURY — The military command says its troops have demolished a heavily fortified black guerrilla base in Zambia in a three-day operation designed to head off a large-scale guerrilla incursion.

Jet bombers and helicopter-borne commandos "completely destroyed" a forward camp located 25 miles inside Zambia and occupied by guerrillas of Joshua Nkomo's wing of the Patriotic Front, the military command said.

Military sources said the ground troops, losing two men who were killed, inflicted few casualties in the raids that ended Tuesday. The 200-odd guerrillas evacuated their bunkers soon after the initial assault, the sources said.

A communique said the operation was mounted "as a result of intelligence indicating a terrorist build-up."

The sources said Nkomo's army is trying to bring large numbers of troops into Zimbabwe Rhodesia so it can claim control over significant territory before any cease-fire is worked out at the seven-week-old London peace talks.

The sources said the land-grabbing effort was aimed at Nkomo's Patriotic Front partner, Robert Mugabe, as much as Prime Minister Bishop Abel Muzorewa's black majority government.

Inside Zimbabwe Rhodesia, government troops killed 53 insurgents, including 34 of Nkomo's men who crossed the Zambezi river into the country, a communique said.

It said Nkomo guerrillas killed four black civilians, while a white couple was killed by a guerrilla landmine in the east.

In another attack in the east, pro-Mugabe guerrillas fired three mortar bombs and a burst of automatic fire at the black township of Dangamvura outside the border city of Umtali Tuesday night, a military spokesman said.

No casualties were reported.

The attack was believed to be part of the guerrillas' effort to pressure blacks to leave urban centers where they are employed by whites and return to their tribal homes.

In Washington, meanwhile, a joint Senate and House of Representatives conference committee rejected an effort Tuesday to add language to a weapons authorization bill that would have forced President Carter to lift economic sanctions against Zimbabwe Rhodesia immediately.

Instead, after a closed meeting which lasted one hour, the committee reported back with language almost identical to what they had started with. The language contained a non-binding "sense of Congress" provision that would not force Carter to lift the sanctions.

Kayakers begin trip to San Francisco

VANCOUVER (CP) — Four enthusiastic paddlers left here Tuesday in pelting rain for a leisurely trip to San Francisco in kayaks.

A fifth member of the expedition will follow on shore in a van with most of the provisions for the 2½-month trip.

"You might say this isn't the best weather in the world to go on such a trip," said Jim Berta, 33, head of the expedition, "but it's the only time we could all get off our respective jobs together, and we're expecting better weather coming up."

Berta is head of Kanawa Expeditions Ltd., a company he founded last year to take experienced and would-be kayakers on trips ranging from two to 10 days. The company also manufactures kayaks.

Berta is a kayak instructor at Capilano College.

He said it was so busy during the summer, instructing, outfitting and going on expeditions, "this is the only time we could go as a group; this is our vacation."

Other members of the expedition are Dan Lewis, 20, Ed Kitt, 19, and two women, Merrily Corder, 33, and Lawelta Muirhead, 30.

The kayakers expect to travel about 20 miles a day. Muirhead is the back-up in the van for the first leg of the journey expected to take them to Tsawwassen. The crew take turns driving the van.

From Tsawwassen they cross the Strait of Georgia to Sidney, south to Oak Bay then across Juan de Fuca Strait to Port Angeles and the trip around the Olympic Peninsula, then down the Washington, Oregon and California coasts to their destination.

They will return in the van.

"We stay close to the beach and its quite simple for us to beach the craft when we want to," said Berta. "Kayaks beach very easily and there's no problem at all."

Temporary link goes up

FORT ST. JOHN (CP) — A temporary truck bridge will replace a northern British Columbia Rail trestle that was destroyed by fire, cutting a major transportation route and threatening the economy of Fort Nelson.

B.C. Rail officials say the temporary bridge should allow normal shipping.

The prefabricated bridge will be put across the Pine River, which joins the Peace River near the burned trestle, to allow B.C. Rail to use most of its track and reduce the need for extended trucking, officials say.

The bridge will be in place in about a week.

B.C. Rail's service to the northern B.C. town was cut early Sunday when 11 runaway rail tanker cars left a Peace River trestle, 20 kilometres south of here, then exploded, destroying the 430-metre structure. The fire cut the vital rail link between part of the Peace River country and the rest of B.C.

Doug MacPhail, mayor of Fort Nelson, which is about 200 kilometres north of here, said his town of about 5,500 faced economic death with sawmills shutting down and hundreds thrown out of work unless an alternate link was developed.

B.C. Rail is the main carrier for the town's forest products and sulphur and for Fort St. John's forest and petroleum products, sulphur and grain.

Emergency meetings between rail and government officials and shippers in the Fort Nelson-Fort St. John area Tuesday produced the temporary bridge solution.

Camping fees up in parks

Camping fees in provincial parks in B.C. have been increased by $1 to cover increased operating costs and park improvements, Lands Minister James Chabot announced Tuesday.

The fees will rise to $3 and $5 and will be in effect throughout the year.

Chabot also announced increased rates for the ski facilities at Manning and Cypress Parks, to bring them in line with other skiing facilities.

There will be reduced rates for senior citizens and children and there will still be free skiing for pre-school children. The season's pass at Cypress Park has been dropped.

Verigin witnesses immune: lawyer

The attorney-general's ministry does not plan to lay charges against individuals who admitted committing arson while testifying against Doukhobor leader John J.Verigin.

Verigin, the spiritual leader of the Union of Spiritual Communities of Christ (USCC), also known as the Orthodox sect, was cleared last month of three charges of conspiracy to commit arson.

During the trial, several members of the rival Freedomite sect said Verigin ordered them to commit arson — orders which they said they carried out for fear of a seven-generation curse from Verigin.

The Orthodox sect is now demanding an explanation from Attorney-General Garde Gardom on why charges were laid against their 58-year-old leader.

And they want to know why charges have not been laid against those persons who admitted they committed arson.

But Brian Waddell, regional Crown counsel who handled the prosecution, said he has no intention of proceeding with charges against those who admitted the arson.

Waddell said it is not general practice to lay charges against those who have offered testimony for the Crown.

In this instance, the Crown would have had no case at all without the testimony from the unindicted co-conspirators, Waddell said.

"If this is to be reconsidered, it will be done at a level above me," he said.

Senior officials in the attorney-general's ministry indicated earlier any further action in the case would be up to the regional Crown counsel.

Scab labor hangup at Endako

A decision by Placer Development to hire replacements for striking workers at its Endako molybdenum mine is a serious new element in the eight-month strike, says a union spokesman.

Peter Cameron of the Canadian Association of Industrial, Mechanical and Allied Workers said the union wants to end the bitter dispute, but Placer's decision to hire scabs could prevent any settlement.

Union and company representatives are meeting in Victoria with Labor Minister Allan Williams. Company spokesmen are only saying they hope the strike can be resolved.

The motor vessel Princess Marguerite suits the style of Victoria. The stately old ship that sports two colorful smoke funnels is of an era that embodies much of the spirit and charm of the province's capital.

Victoria's concern for heritage is the foundation of a multi-million dollar tourist industry. For the thousands of people that boarded the Marguerite or simply viewed her from the Victoria and Seattle waterfronts over the past 31 years, she has become a flagship of that reverance for history.

Since her construction in Scotland in 1948 she has become so familiar on the Victoria — Seattle run that she has been compared to other world famous tourist lures. The cable cars in San Francisco and the gondolas of Venice are among them. To see her replaced by a modern ferry would indeed be sad.

However, those in the provincial government and the B.C. Steamship Corporation view the ship in terms of dollars and cents. The Maggie, as she is known by many, has problems with her kitchen, sewage disposal and crews quarters.

It is estimated that $500,000 is needed to refurbish her with holding tanks to comply with American anti-dumping legislation. A further $250,000 is needed to bring the galley to federal health standards. And to top the list off, an additional half million is required for her annual refit.

According to Transport Minister Alex Fraser, pumping more than a million dollars into such an aged vessel might be less than economical. Alternatives such as purchasing another vessel in Europe or rearranging the north coast ferry fleet have been discussed. But as yet there has been no decision.

From a utilitarian point of view, the Maggie has been holding her own. Ninety per cent of her passengers are American, and it is believed that she is importing some $10 to $15 million a year for the cash registers of local businesses. The number of people carried this summer was 360,000 — nearly a 50 per cent increase over last year.

It may well be impossible to determine how the Maggie figures in the thought processes of Americans who decide to visit Victoria, but an educated guess would suggest that at the very least, she stimulates the imagination.

For travellers hooked on trains and boats and other earthly forms of transportation, getting there is half the adventure. Just to ride on a vintage marine vessel, the likes of which will likely never be seen again, could for many, make all the difference between going and staying.

It would seem that when compared to the price of new ships, the cost of refitting the Maggie would be a small price to pay to save such a dramatic symbol of the image Victoria projects.

Too permanent

One little furry Vancouver Island Marmot didn't crawl into bed soon enough this fall. Normally these rare members of the woodchuck family start an eight-month hibernation in late September or early October. But this particular fellow must have sauntered out of his burrow atop a mountain near Nanaimo to investigate the intrusion of a party of humans. A shotgun wielding lunatic put him to sleep forever.

It is believed that the species of marmot found on Vancouver Island numbers only between 50 and 100.

These stout-bodied, bushy-tailed animals are listed by the provincial environment ministry as the most endangered species in British Columbia. But as yet special legal status for them remains tenuous.

Often called the "whistler" because of its shrill call to warn of danger, the marmot inhabits alpine slopes near the tree line. But a combination of logging and recreational use of land near their colonies is believed responsible for the significant reduction of their numbers in the last 60 years.

The plight of the marmot rallied Vancouver Island conservationists and naturalists as far back as 1972. Their work has helped to convince some logging companies to leave intact the environment around a couple of marmot colonies.

Earlier this year they asked the provincial government to make a series of moves to help ensure the survival of the species.

The plan called for a ban on shooting, development restrictions in the areas around known marmot colonies, and the establishment of at least one ecological reserve.

Those provisions may do nothing to stop a gun-toting clown, but would be a good start. There is nothing more permanent than extinction.

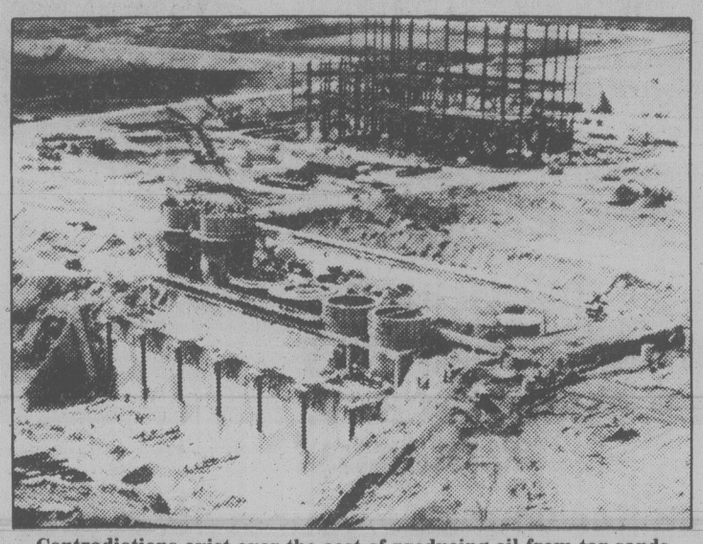
RICHARD GWYN

The key is revenue, not oil

OTTAWA — The good news of this summer was that oil may have been found in large quantities in the Beaufort Sea and off Newfoundland. The bad news of this fall will be that, to save us from freezing in the dark, the price we pay for our oil will soar toward world levels.

Between those two bits of information, you will have noticed a certain contradiction.

According to News Item No. 2, we are running short of oil, and so, in order to pay for the costs of exploring for the stuff and for producing it, we need to pay near world prices (about $26 a barrel).



Contradictions exist over the cost of producing oil from tar sands.

Found oil

According to News Item No. 1, companies such as Dome and Gulf and Chevron and Mobil, none of which are conspicuous for their charity, have explored for and have found oil, although not as yet in commercial quantities, in the Arctic and in the Atlantic. These discoveries — either or both could be a North Sea-sized find — were made by companies which at the time they dispatched their drilling rigs, knew that they would have to find their profits out of their share of the present low Canadian oil price of $13.50 a barrel.

In other words, if a price of $13.50 a barrel has been encouragement enough, together with tax subsidies for exploration, for oil companies to do what they are supposed to do, why then do we need now to pay, roughly, twice as much, to get them to do what they already are doing?

Ah, said an energy department type, when I asked him, what may be true for the Beaufort and the Atlantic, isn't true for tar sands and oil sands plants. To extract this gooey stuff requires world prices. Without this synthetic oil, the official added, the Clark government's target of self-sufficiency by 1990 could not be met.

Ah, I replied, what you say about tar and oil sands plants may not be true. Bechtel Engineering of San Francisco has just done a study, reported in The Economist magazine, which concludes that oil can be dug out of the sands at prices ($15-$18) well below world prices.

Ah, said the official, he would get back to me. He didn't.

Wherever there's smoke, goes the old adage, there's a smoke-generator. To get the new oil supplies that we need, we are told we must pay the price set by an international oil market that's been turned upside-down (a 60 per cent price increase so far this year) by Ayatollah Kohmeini's feat in turning Iran back to the 13th century. Yet the planned Allsands tar sands plant has been designed on the basis of $18 a barrel oil. A confidential energy department study concludes that oil from the recently discovered, and iceberg-free, Hibernia well off Newfoundland could be brought ashore, at a profit, at a mere $6 a barrel.

The two sides of the equation don't add up. The reason is that we are using the wrong multiplier. Stop thinking about supplies of oil. Already, we may have found all that we need on our frontiers. If not, we can't become self-sufficient by 1990 anyway, because there isn't time by then — price here can make little difference — to build enough tar and oil sands plants.

Start thinking instead about supplies of tax revenues. Clearly, Canada is short of oil. Even more clearly, though, Ottawa is short of cash. It's into the red this year by about $12 billion. It'll be as deep in the red next year, because savings caused by spending restraint will be offset by revenue losses caused by the recession.

Consider now the Clark government's plan, as part of its energy package, to impose an excise tax of up to 30 cents a gallon on gasoline at the pump. The justification is conservation, of which we are all in favor. The motivation, however, is tax revenues — a potential take of $4 billion, and which Ottawa is in favor of even more.

Consider the hike, at a rate of $4 a barrel a year, in the "wellhead" price of oil. The more we pay for our own oil, the less Ottawa has to pay to Quebec and the Maritimes to offset the cost of the imported oil they bring in at world prices. (But for this equalization scheme Canada really would become two nations, with citizens in the east paying $26 a barrel for oil while those in Ontario and the West paid only $13.50 a barrel.)

Extra revenue

Consider lastly, the extra revenues Ottawa will get, either directly from its share of the $4 a barrel a year hike in the wellhead price, or indirectly through money recycled back by Alberta into a National Energy Bank. Ottawa will dig into this kitty to find energy projects; if the kitty didn't exist, Ottawa would have to dig into its revenues to fund the same projects.

The oil price increase, thus, is a smokescreen for a tax increase. Behind it there's some real fire: We are running short of oil, and fresh supplies from the frontier or the tar and oil sands will be progressively more expensive. The smoke-generator, though, is being manned, not by officials at the energy department but by their colleagues at the department of finance. If you can get close to them you'll overhear them chanting, "the Ayatollah be praised." The refrain is: "The taxpayer be damned."

Self-reliance

Although it is difficult for an ordinary citizen to comment on recent increase in the cost of borrowing money, may I point out the other side of the coin, namely the higher interests on saving accounts. For persons on fixed income, the few extra dollars given by chartered banks and other financial institutions are a real blessing at a time when costs of goods and services are very high. Wage earners should give a serious thought about sheltering even a small portion of their income into a savings account to protect themselves and their families against emergencies, and consider wise to wait awhile to buy the things they need and to avoid costly loans.

Waiting to get a new piece of furniture, a new television set, postponing a vacation may require a considerable amount of self-denial and self-control, but will offer the tangible and untangible rewards of responsibility, self-respect and peace of mind. Plunging deeper and deeper into debt only creates personal and family problems, often leading to despair and defeat.

There are many saving plans, insurance policies, extending on a wide field, from protection to widows and orphans, to guaranteed plans as supplement to OAP and Canada Pension Plan.

It is impossible to plunge deeper and deeper into the uncertain and limited welfare state. Except for individuals physically and mentally unable to provide for their future, this is the time to enhance and rely on personal responsibility.

Chartered banks, trust companies and credit unions, all have intelligent, competent, courteous persons who are willing and ready to offer free advice and guidance in helping depositors to chose a plan that suits their future and present needs.

Not to take advantages of these opportunities is sheer folly. We are living in a society which should be heading in placing more emphasis on individual responsibility, rather than our reliance of governments' so-called social assistance programs.

In conclusion, individuals becoming self-sufficient and self-reliant will achieve a higher degree of self-esteem and self-respect.

Human dignity is very important and, apart from some moderate and very modest financial security it is a source of deep satisfaction and, yes, tranquil happiness. — E. J. Lattes, 432-200 Dallas Road.

No other way

On Sept. 25, the Montreal Star, which is wholly-owned by F.P. Publications Limited, announced that it was ceasing publication after 111 years' service to the Montreal community. An article in your newspaper on Oct. 4 states that this decision caused the Victoria Labor Council to pass a resolution calling for government protection against closure without warning.

The concern of organized labor for protection of employees in the event of mass lay-off or plant closure is understandable. In the case of the Montreal Star, where nearly 1,000 employees will lose their jobs, the company has offered severance pay, including fringe benefits, ranging from a minimum of five months to a maximum of one year depending upon length of service. In the province of Quebec, the mimumum statutory requirement is four months' compensation and, in view of the heavy financial losses which have been incurred, the company believes that the proposed severance arrangement is fair.

Granted, the decision to close the Star came as a shock to the employees and to the Montreal anglophone community. However, the proposal of the Victoria Labor Council that employees be given notice of closure and that the terms of severance be negotiated in advance is entirely impractical in the newspaper industry. Had the company announced its intention to close the newspaper in advance, advertisers would have responded immediately by cancelling their contracts and switching to other media. Moreover, circulation would have sharply declined. Thus the financial condition of the newspaper would have rapidly deteriorated, perhaps forcing the company into bankruptcy, thus precluding reasonable severance arrangements with employees.

While not disputing the need for reasonable and humanitarian severance arrangements, the nature of the newspaper industry is such that advance warning of an intention to close is simply not workable. — G.N.M. Currie, President, FP Publications Ltd.

Violent ghosts

Regarding the cattle maimings on the prairies, incredible as it sounds these could be other dimensional psychic happenings.

Poltergeists or violent ghosts can be very malevolent. Down through the centuries, starting with Elijah, there have been mysterious disappearances and appearances, deaths and woundings.

Science is at last coming round to accepting parapsychology and the idea of a fourth dimension, there may be many more. Our minds can usually only operate in three dimensions but the astounding feats of the Indian yogis show that as Shakespeare said "there are more things in heaven and earth than ever we dreamed of". — H. S. Thuillier, 2424 Beach Drive.

Trouble with style

Our new prime minister seems to have difficulty in distinguishing between stubbornness and strength, for they are not the same thing at all. The former smacks of obstinacy, self-will or just plain cussedness while the latter indicates greatness, intensity and pre-eminence.

A prime example of that is to be found in the Tel Aviv-Jerusalem caper, where to gain a few votes in a single riding, Mr. Clark thoughtlessly made a stupid promise and then obstinately stood by it long enough to do great harm to Canadian commercial interests.

PetroCanada is another example of the same characteristic, where public opinion has been ignored in favor of some preconceived notions taken from the gospel according to Adam Smith.

Again, the P.M.'s determination to give more power to the provinces without regard to either the constitution or the history of others. Remember how quickly the American confederation fell apart and is now almost forgotten? To amend our own BNA Act is one thing but to allow the P.M. to decide as to the enforcement of articles in it is quite another and definitely wrong. Partnership between his government and those of the provinces is all very fine just as long as he remembers that the federal government is the senior partner, with the last word and, if necessary, the power to veto any provincial legislation running contrary to the national interest.

No one questions but what Mr. Clark is sincere and well-meaning, so it is to be hoped that as he faces the complexities of our present situation he will become wiser as well. He certainly has the best wishes of all for that, as the very existence of our country is at stake. — F. L. P. Anderson, 409-2174 Cadboro Bay Road.

Increase aid

The most important and the most sacred of all the human rights is the right to live. And when that very basic right is virtually deprived to a billion brethren in our global village, who are often victims of unjust social and economic order in the world then the other rights do not matter much.

Flora MacDonald and the rest of the Clark government's intentions to cut down the foreign and, specially to the poorest of the poor, contradict outright with their claim of being the leading advocates of human rights in the world.

I wonder if they are suggesting that the rights of the dissidents behind the iron curtain, etc., are more important than the rights of hundreds of millions of poor innocent little children facing grim spectre of death due to starvation and disease!

I urge you all to please write to the government to increase our aid to 0.7 per cent of our GNP, the goal agreed at UN, instead of cutting it down, and that our aid must go to poorest of the poor countries and to poorest of the poor of those countries.

Without love, compassion and concern for the less fortunates, one's life is empty no matter how high her social or economic status may be. — Ms. Hansi Bish, 20 - 72 Dallas Road.

Wise spending

Would someone in the legislature stand up and tell the public why money accumulated by this government neglects, to the sorrow of veterans, their wives, etc., the upkeep of the hospitals?

A half million dollars for art treasures is fine. To send some politician on a Roman holiday is peachy; to waste money is a tragedy in these inflated times.

No system is perfect. We should all realize that the ultimate aim of each elected politician is first to see the greatest benefit lies not in his gain or favor, but in the interest of the majority. — Howard Snider, 879 Esquimalt Road.

Re: current "lettergate" and "dirty tricks:" Ms. Ellen Mackay who is presently receiving so much publicity on radio, TV and press, has no family or clan connection with the undersigned. — G. A. Mackay, 24 Wellington Avenue.

Negotiating closure was impossible for the Montreal Star says official.

THE GLOBE AND MAIL
An Editorial

The authority of police to invade private premises, search private property and seize private possessions may well be essential to the public peace, but it is and must remain an authority vigorously and visibly circumscribed by law. The potential this authority holds for abuse is nothing short of awesome; the consequences, nothing short of the Gulag. Why, then, in his test flight as justice minister, has Senator Jacques Flynn decided to preserve this authority, while tossing our defences against it to the wolves?

Simple inadvertence may be ruled out: Senator Flynn is no babe in arms. Rather, he is a career politician, has spent a dozen years as Opposition leader in the Senate, and is an experienced lawyer. He knows what he is about.

Senator Flynn has announced his plans to introduce legislation barring publication of police searches until (or unless) they become evidence at a trial. If passed, such a law would ensure that what the police do, could be done in darkness; we won't read about it, we won't hear about it, we won't know.

Senator Flynn has declared that his purpose is upright; the ban, he said, "will prevent needless and improper embarrassment suffered by those who are never charged following a properly conducted search of their premises by the police." Maybe so, but the law would perform other services as well. It would prevent publication of improperly conducted searches; it would prevent publication of any search that did not produce evidence to be used in a trial; it would foil the public's ability to ensure that evidence is collected legally and used fairly; it would devastate the succession of safeguards that now surrounds the use of search warrants.

There are reams of Canadian statutory and case law, aimed at protecting some semblance of the individual's right to privacy against the long, muscled arm of police search powers.

A search warrant can be authorized only by a judge, who must be convinced there are reasonable grounds to believe it will yield evidence of a criminal office; a search warrant must specify the premises to be searched; a search warrant should not authorize a fishing expedition; failure to describe the suspected offence clearly in the search warrant means the warrant is void; the acquisition of a new search warrant to replace a warrant that is the subject of a motion to quash is an abuse of process; documents obtained with the aid of a search warrant that are subject to solicitor-client privilege are to be returned to the solicitor; and on and on.

Unless reports of police searches are published, the public will have no assurance that these safeguards are being observed. If they are not observed, the consequences are as obvious as they are unbearable: vague, open-ended search warrants, fishing expeditions, search-and-destroy missions, violation of due process, misuse of evidence, invasion of privileged communication. Such abuses would be readily available, with nothing to prevent them save blind public faith in the competence and integrity of the judiciary and the police. We would be fools to be so faithful.

According to Senator Flynn's office, the press could legally report police raids if reporters were eyewitnesses or if the subject of the raid stated publicly that he had been searched. We would be fools to feel comforted by this, however, since police are under no obligation to inform property-owners that they will be or have been searched. The justice department is talking nonsense.

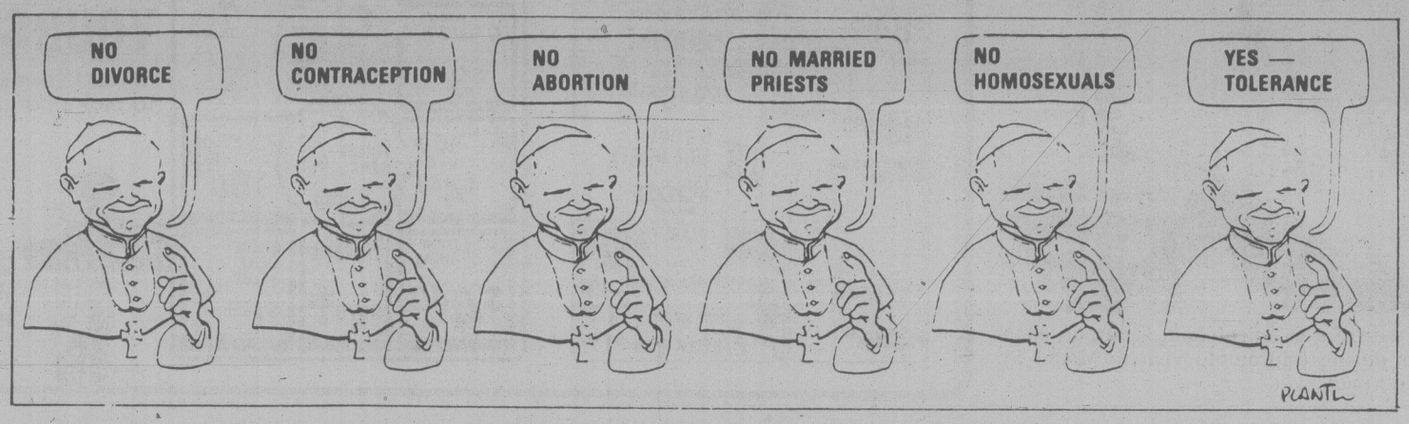
Senator Flynn is talking worse than nonsense. He is threatening a fundamental principle of justice — the principle that any compromise of individual sovereignty shall be firmly and publicly limited by law. He would make fugitives of us all.

He must be stopped.

FLYNN . . . 'he must be stopped'

Pope on birth control: A good man giving bad advice

By CONOR CRUISE O'BRIEN
London Observer



"Why all this talk about contraceptives, dear? Didn't we all come into the world without those things?" Thus reasoned an elderly lady in Fermoy, County Cork, some years ago. The correctness of that good lady's line now stands approved at the highest level.

A well-known Anglican divine, in conversation just after the pope's return to Rome, put that matter in this way: "I'm glad to see him going round so much because he is so obviously a good man, and I'm glad to hear him talk so much, because he keeps proving he's not infallible."

He proved that, perhaps, to the satisfaction of people who did not believe he was infallible in the first place — although even most of those seemed less concerned with the nature of his authority, or with what he was actually saying, than they were impressed with how nice a man he is and how he moved the crowds.

It is also necessary to consider the direction in which he is moving those crowds.

Those Catholics who came out in their millions to greet the pope did so, not because he is a very nice Polish priest, but because they believe him to be Christ's Vicar on Earth, chosen by the Holy Spirit, infallible teacher in matters of faith and morals. That was why all those people were there: the fact that the pope also happens to be a very nice Polish priest was a bonus, making the occasion more joyful.

The more one reflects on the awesome character of those claims, the more I think one is likely to be concerned with the use being made of that vast spiritual authority, as distinct from being impressed by the display of that authority's charismatic existence.

A good man giving bad advice is more dangerous than a nasty man giving bad advice. A good man, whom you believe to be infallible, and who gives you bad advice, can hurt you a lot, and, through you, others.

Of course the pope gave some good advice, notably his repeated warning against violence, and we must hope (in my case without much conviction) that this will bear fruit. But other advice he gave is perhaps more likely to bear fruit, and in a more literal sense. His strong and repeated condemnations of contraception mean that more women are likely to have more babies that they don't want and can't look after properly.

One should neither exaggerate nor minimize the extent of this. Among the million who heard the pope in Ireland and the U.S. and — through broadcasting — in other lands, there must have been hundreds of thousands of women who are on the pill, and most of these will probably keep on the pill. But there must be some who will be dissuaded from the use of any contraceptives and still others who will use them but feel guilty, to the detriment of their family life. The poorest, who are not using contraceptives, will be dissuaded from learning about their use. And the process will continue: the pope's words strengthen the traditionalists in the church everywhere and weaken the authority of those who have been condoning the use of contraceptives. That old Lady in Fermoy henceforward triumphs over those who have tried to reason with her.

Helpless fecundity is sometimes among the causes of marriage breakdown and it always ensures that the victims of the breakdown — fatherless or motherless children — are as numerous as possible.

It is perhaps the grimmest paradox of our time that a religion of love should encourage the procreation of unwanted children. Nothing, obviously, is further from the pope's intention. He wants people to have lots of children, and love them all. And some people can do that. Unfortunately, there are many more who cannot: not just those who abscond, and vote for divorce with their feet but also those, more numerous, with more children than they can manage, in any effective way, to love.

It is a matter of common observation that much — perhaps most — of the world's crime and cruelty is perpetrated by people who grew up feeling unwanted or rejected. The thought was best expressed by the poet 'A.E.' in lines made familiar to many by Graham Greene:

In the lost childhood of Judas
Christ was betrayed.

The principles on which the pope insists mean, in practice, more unhappy children too. They also mean that a powerful influence is thrown against recognizing that the tremendous rate of expansion of world population is a problem with which we need to cope. By the pope's principles it seems that the expansion is good in itself: about all that is needed is to match it with greater food production.

On those principles we shall have standing room only on the planet by the middle of the next century.

There was a time — the time of Pope John, of Vatican II, and the Aggiornamento — when one might hope that the intellectual as well as the emotional resources of a religion of compassion were beginning to be deployed in a rational relation to the realities of the modern world, so that the compassion directed to those realities might become more effective in practice.

Those hopes received a great setback under the pontificate of Paul VI, with the encyclical Humanae Vitae. The setback now looks like turning into a rout. Where Pope Paul was cautiously and colorlessly conservative, Pope John Paul II is a crusading traditionalist — and at the same time loved and acclaimed by more people than any Pope in the history of the Church.

As I wrote in this column earlier this year — 'Long Day's Journey into Prayer' — I have personal experience of the power of love in a Catholic community and of how it can help the sick and the suffering. All the more need, then, for that power to be brought to bear on the world's suffering — through the use of the reason which God also gave us — and not diverted by the irrational prejudices of generations of male celibates into actually swelling the mass of human suffering.

Two on the wing tip

Russell Baker

NEW YORK — In this nightmare the airlines have been taken over by people who run the Broadway theatre business and I am trying to get from New York to wherever Grandmother lives in time for Thanksgiving dinner.

My appetite has been whetted by press agents whose ads have cunningly pruned the critics and tossed in a spice of exclamation marks to make the mouth water. " 'Grandmother's Thanksgiving dinner — the feast of the year!': Barnes." " 'The turkey of the season!': Kerr." " 'Grandmother's performance is pure Smithfield!': Watt."

I find myself gazing through a tiny barred aperture suitable for the iron door of the cell of Edmond Dantes in the Chateau d'If. It is the ticket office. Peering out at me from inside is the airline clerk.

"Two tickets to Grandmother's, please."

He sizes me up, does not like what he sees. His attitude makes it clear he considers me unworthy of going to Grandmother's — that he does not want people like me on his airplanes.

"What day do you want?"

"Thanksgiving."

I have made his day. His face speaks sentences. "What kind of imbecile are you?" it asks. "You think you can just walk up to an airline and buy two tickets to Grandmother's on Thanksgiving just like that?"

"I know I'm asking a lot," I say. Aloud.

Aloud, he says, "I've got nothing for Thanksgiving." His happiness at being able to disoblige me is so complete that I would feel happy about giving him so much pleasure if it were not so obviously mixed with contempt.

I will not give him greater satisfaction by looking disappointed. "When can I get two good seats on the plane?" I ask.

"Next summer," he says.

"The turkey will be a little dry by then."

"If you don't want 'em, move aside. You're holding up the line."

I ask if he has anything at all before Thanksgiving. "I can give you two on the wing tip next week," he says. I have sat on the wing tip before. All you can see out there are the engines. "Take 'em or leave 'em," he says.

As always, I take 'em. In the manner of nightmares, the scene shifts instantly, and I am en route to Grandmother's, a month before Thanksgiving dinner, to be sure, but at least when the smart people start saying they have been to Grandmother's I will be able to hold my own by saying, "Me too."

A stewardess hands me a program. Good. Maybe I can kill the month by hanging around Grandmother's airport reading it, then turn up at the old dear's house on turkey day, after all.

The seats are on the wing tip, all right, but fortunately there is a vast woman in an immense hat in front of me to break the airflow. For some reason I can also hear what is happening inside the cabin.

"Ladies and gentlemen," a steward is saying, "Flight Capt. David Garrick, who pilots this plane, will not be at the controls in tonight's flight. His job will be performed by Herbert Helmsbotham, who normally mixes and serves your refreshments in the aisle. The role of co-pilot, usually played by Flight Officer Edwin Booth, will be played tonight by Miss Bo-Bo Bissingay, your senior flight attendant."

I feel simultaneously cheated and endangered. "Let's go back to the airport and get our money back," says the person travelling with me. Yes, yes. My sentiment exactly. But I am reluctant. It would mean facing the ticket seller again.

"So Herbie Helmsbotham and Bo-Bo Bissingay at the controls aren't good enough for you?" he would doubtless sneer. "Well, cheapskate, here's your money back, but don't ever try to get another airline ticket to Grandmother's."

I try to comfort my companion. "I hear Helmsbotham and Bissingay have been terrific at the controls in ground school," I say. "Let's give them a break and maybe tonight we'll see two stars born."

It is obvious we are not going to see anything from those seats, and I am privately planning to spend the second leg of the flight drinking at a bar across the street once the plane makes its intermission landing at Aunt Sally's to take on more calcified orange juice. The flight attendant looms over me, demanding to see my tickets. Behind her stand two angry passengers. Problem: I am seated on the wrong wing tip.

I must get up, go to the back of the tail assembly and relocate myself properly. While I am at it, I figure I might as well duck out and get the cigarettes I left in my car. I get to the parking garage just in time to see the parking attendants using sledgehammers to dent the fenders. It is their way of expressing resentment against the moneyed classes who can squander money on a trip to Grandmother's.

Prospect Lake access urged

Saanich planning committee Tuesday recommended to council that access to the east side of Prospect Lake be bought or expropriated.

The committee approved a motion by Mayor Mel Couvelier to ask municipal staff to investigate the cost of acquiring such an access, by purchase or expropriation.

Ena Lang, speaking for a group of 15 residents, said there was no public access because planners didn't demand it when four lakefront properties were subdivided this summer.

The properties occupy all the waterfront between Echo Drive and Prospect Lake golf course.

Lang, who has lived at 291 Stevens for 14 years, noted that under the Land Registry Act, the public is entitled to access every 660 feet when waterfront property is subdivided.

She claimed the most recently purchased property was bought on the condition that there would be no public access.

Couvelier revealed an April 19 memo from municipal surveyor Gordon Alston-Stewart questioning planning policy. In it, Alston-Stewart says Saanich is not getting its legal share of water access under the municipality's present policy. He suggests that despite the steepness of Prospect Lake's east shore, some access or a dedication of a public strip should be possible.

Safe hit for $300

An overnight safecracking at Bartle and Gibson plumbing supplies, 960 Yates, netted thieves about $300.

Police said they entered through a skylight and after smashing open the safe with a seldgehammer went out a back door.

Socred MLA has NDP's number

Officials of the provincial Saanich and the Islands NDP Association were taken aback last week after selecting the winning number in their fund-raising raffle.

Winner of the hand-stitched quilt was George Mussallem, Dewdney MLA and Social Credit Party whip in the legislature.

Mussallem said Tuesday he bought three tickets from NDP researcher John Mika.

"It's a plot. I'll have to check to make sure it doesn't explode," Mussallem said on learning he had won.

Gorge petition late?

Petitioners wanting the Gorge Park extended and public ownership of the old San Sebastian Motel and Victoria Motor Court property may be too late.

A petition signed by 300 residents will be delivered to Mayor Mel Couvelier of Saanich this week by organizer William Comerford, who grew up in the area.

But heavy equipment has already attacked the nine-acre site of the former motels in preparation for six four-storey apartment buildings.

The property was sold to Litwin Construction two months ago by 76 Developments, a Victoria.

Comerford hopes council will consider ordering a postponement of construction until a public hearing is held.

He said public acquisition of the site and improved access to the water would double the size of the park and enhance its "sanctuary effect."

Skatebowl may reopen

Saanich parks and recreation committee is looking into ways of reopening the Saanich skatebowl which closed this summer for financial reasons.

The committee agreed Tuesday night to study a North Vancouver municipal operation which parks administrator Frank Andrews said has proven trouble-free.

The move came after six young skateboard enthusiasts appeared before the committee to request the municipality reopen the concrete skatebowl near Cedar Hill Community Centre.

Andrews said the North Vancouver bowl is operated on an at-your-own-risk basis and felt sure parents of children using the Saanich facility would be willing to keep an eye on things if a similar policy was adopted by council here.

Committee chairman Ald. Geoff Vantreight said he supports a municipal takeover of the skatebowl because of the many youngsters wanting to use it.

However, Mayor Mel Couvelier called for a more detailed appraisal of the North Vancouver operation before council gives a go-ahead to the proposal.

Aberdeen may be expanded

Expansion of the Aberdeen Hospital on Hillside may be considered by the Juan de Fuca Hospital Society.

Charles Jackson, chairman of the society's board, told the annual general meeting Monday night that Aberdeen is the logical site for expansion.

He said there is land there for growth and the incoming board will study proposals.

Jackson was returned as board chairman for another year.

Elected by acclamation to three-year terms were Jessie Bridges, Rudy Kind and Robert Mason.

Al Comberbach was returned for a two-year term and Dorothy Small and Stan Hiscock for one-year terms.

The society finished the financial year to March 31 with a deficit of $391,802 for the four hospitals it operates — Aberdeen, the Priory, Glengarry and Mount Tolmie, which have a total of 450 beds.

The board had a surplus in 1977-1978 after government grants of more than $67,000.

Man pried free by Jaws of Life

Victoria firemen used their Jaws of Life machine Tuesday night to free a 32-year-old man pinned inside the wreckage of a car.

The vehicle struck a utility pole in the 800-block Esquimalt Road.

Police said Richard Stewart was taken to Victoria General Hospital along with the driver of the car, Albert Smith, 37, of 5-646 Admirals and another passenger, Susan Harris, 15, address not known.

Stewart is in satisfactory condition recovering from a broken leg, facial cuts and back injuries.

The other two were treated for cuts and bruises and later released.

B.C. Indian chiefs oppose Trans-Mountain proposal

VANCOUVER (CP) — An oil spill at Trans Mountain Pipe Line Co.'s proposed oil port could end up in the Fraser River, the Union of British Columbia Indian Chiefs told the National Energy Board on Tuesday.

But Trans Mountain said trajectory studies of potential spills showed oil would not flow through Juan de Fuca and Haro straits to the mouth of the Fraser.

"The salmon would be killed in the Fraser," the Indian chiefs' legal counsel said in an interview. "The oil would be carried up river with the tide."

A marine expert said the tide goes up the Fraser River as far as Chilliwack, about 120 kilometres, and that there is a 10-per-cent chance of oil from a spill in Juan de Fuca Strait reaching the Fraser.

Trans Mountain admitted it had not done environmental studies on the effects of an oil spill on salmon in the Fraser.

Trans Mountain has a $600-million proposal to build an oil port at Low Point, Wash., on the Juan de Fuca Strait, to receive oil in tankers from Alaska. The oil would be pumped through a new pipeline from the Puget Sound area to Edmonton, and then south to United States midwest markets.

Trans Mountain wants the board to grant it a conditional certificate to go ahead with its oil port-pipeline plan.

The chiefs said U.S. President Jimmy Carter — who is due to make a statement on the controversial oil pipeline Dec. 6 — may say no oil pipeline should be built.

Trans Mountain said that if Carter decided against a pipeline, there were still 300,000 barrels a day of oil being transported through Juan de Fuca Strait by tankers coming down the coast from Alaska, and other tankers arriving from Indonesia and Arabia.

"Our plan would add another 500,000 barrels a day to the amount now being carried through the strait," Trans Mountain said.

Trans Mountain told the board "B.C. would get massive economic benefits from our plan."

Wolfe chasing late payments

Interim Deregulation Minister Evan Wolfe will get tough with government ministries and agencies that fall more than 30 days behind in paying their bills to the private sector.

"I'd like anyone who has specific evidence of slow payment to bring it to my attention and we'll get to the bottom of it," Wolfe said Tuesday.

Payment of government accounts within 30 days of receipt of goods and services "has been given top priority" by deregulation officials.

Wolfe blamed the tardiness of the provincial government's postal service and the federal post office for the delays.

A recent study showed most bills are paid by government within 38 days, but the ministry is looking for an improvement.

Changes in the comptroller-general's office have been made to speed things up, the minister added.

The deregualtion ministry was created last December to cut red tape and expedite government action in various areas.

The ministry is designed to accomplish all its duties in two years at which time it will be disbanded.

Before the judge

A 19-year-old who passed worthless cheques while on parole was given a suspended sentence Tuesday in provincial court.

Donald Brook, 1330 Esquimalt, pleaded guilty to two of three counts of false pretences and Crown counsel Richard Law entered a stay of proceedings on the remaining count.

Law told Judge Harold Alder the two counts to which Brook pleaded guilty involved a June 22 cheque to The Bay for $35.36 and a June 26 cheque to Sears for $72.79.

Law said Brook opened an account at the Greater Victoria Savings Credit Union with a $75 deposit June 11 but only had $9.50 in the account when the cheques were written. Brook was convicted in November, 1977, of 14 counts of breaking and entering in Richmond and was sentenced to 12 months and placed on two years probation.

Defence lawyer Stephen Kelliher said Brook's employer went bankrupt and Brook never received his paycheque and couldn't meet the overdraft. Kelliher also said his client's common-law wife was four months pregnant.

Alder handed out a suspended sentence, placed Brook on 12 months probation and ordered him to make restitution to the stores.

Another 19-year-old charged with five counts elected trial by judge without jury and had his preliminary hearing set for March 27.

Todd Elmer Axelson, 1849 Chimo Place, was charged with attempted armed robbery, conspiracy with a juvenile to commit robbery, using a disguise during a robbery attempt, possession of a knife dangerous to the public peace, and theft of an auto in connection with an incident Oct. 14 near Tan's Food Market, 1652 McRae.

Also electing trial by judge without jury was 25-year-old Kerry Gail Duncan, 337 St. James.

She is charged with being an accessory after the fact in connection with an Oct. 2 incident in which 31-year-old Vaughan Grant Armstrong, an inmate of William Head penitentiary, went missing from a swimming party at the Crystal Pool.

Her preliminary hearing was set for March 10.

Gap in tape ruled no breach of code

An 11-minute gap in the tape recording of a provincial court trial did not cause a breach of a Criminal Code requirement that trials be recorded, Mr. Justice Martin Taylor of the B.C. Supreme Court ruled Tuesday.

He said Judge Blake Allan was attempting to comply with the requirement and it was impossible to say the judge could not have succeeded.

He dismissed an application to compel Allan to enter an acquittal or to order a mistrial because of the failure to record 11 minutes of the cross-examination of a prosecution witness.

But he said if there was a disregard of compliance with the requirement to record, the judge would lose jurisdiction to hear the case, and in that event Taylor said he would have granted the application by lawyer Robert Price.

The case involved Richard Wesley Smith, accused of impaired driving, driving with his blood-alcohol content over .08 per cent and wilful obstruction of a policeman on March 18.

The trial was before Judge Allan Aug. 1 when the machine failed to record 11 minutes.

Crown counsel Robert Mulligan said just because there was some defect in the mandatorily-required recording of evidence that did not necessarily mean there must be a new trial or discharge of the accused.

Price argued that it was not a remedy to restart the trial and the Criminal Code states that "there shall be a recording." He said the whole case must be recorded, not part of it, and it wasn't known what was missing. He also said a complete transcript would be needed in the event of an appeal.

Taylor noted that Judge Allan denied an application for a mistrial and asked Price to repeat the lost portion but this was declined and Supreme Court proceedings were started.

He said the case dramatically points up the difference between a failure to comply with the recording requirement and an attempt to comply with it.

He ruled that it cannot be said there had been a failure to comply with the requirement to record. The trial judge was trying, doing his best, to see there would be a record by asking counsel to repeat what had been lost.

If the answers on the rerun were different than before, that might make for a different situation, he said, but if the answers were the same, it wouldn't. Taylor said he should not assume that there would be differences.

If the answers given in the missing 11 minutes were fairly simple, the judge's procedure would have enabled compliance with the recording requirement. If they were complex, or if there was a dispute over the answers, then there would be grounds for a mistrial.

Greenwood seeks seat left vacant by Brice

Former trustee Lavinia Greenwood will seek the one-year vacancy on Greater Victoria School Board created with the mid-term resignation of Susan Brice.

In school board elections next month there are three other announced candidates and two incumbents for four, two-year terms.

Greenwood, 59, who served an initial one-year term and two regular terms before stepping down in 1977, said she wants to see a more harmonious relationship between trustees and with the administration, "instead of against it." She objects to the partisan type of school board of the past two years.

Since leaving the board she has been chairman of the Victoria branch of John Howard Society of which she remains a director, and is vice-president of the Victoria Conservatory of Music. In addition she has completed a master's degree in education, specializing in secondary level sciences.

While at the University of Victoria Greenwood served as a member of the academic planning committee.

As a mother of four and a grandmother, the candidate said she is keen on the idea of parent committees and the influence they should have in schools.

She would like to see a better balance between budget setting and control of spending afterwards.

Trustee Glyn Williams said Monday he will not seek another term on the board because of pressure of business, and in a parting statement said families are often too willing to abdicate the responsibility of raising children, leaving much to the schools.

Incumbents Carol Pickup and John Young intend to run for re-election. New candidates include Michael Hutchison, Joan Dayton and Joan Johnston.

Ye olde Phone Shoppe battles Ma Bell

TORONTO (CP) — A sign in the Phone Shoppe's store reads: You don't buy your lamps from Hydro, why rent your phones from Bell?

The sign symbolizes the continuing battle of independents with giant Bell Canada over the right to sell phones directly to the public.

It appears the phone shops are here to stay.

One survey estimates that the independent shops will achieve sales of $285 million a year by 1985.

First-year sales of the Phone Shoppe in the downtown Eaton Centre are expected to be about $500,000.

While the idea for the Phone Shoppes was conceived by Chris Gadula and Bill Biggar, both 27, their silent partner is N.M. Davis Corp. Ltd., which is planning a chain in major shopping centres

Plans call for 15 stores in the Toronto area in the next 18 months.

Bell has been fighting the phone shop mavericks in court, so far without success. Courts have ruled against Bell in what has been dubbed interconnection — plugging into Bell's system without a Bell instrument.

Bell gave signs that it may be weakening when it announced in its last annual report that it would favor a "controlled liberalization of policy to permit the connection of customer-owned terminal equip ment . . . provided . . . that Bell is allowed to compete on an equal footing."

Gadula, a former Bell employee, finds this laughable, saying Bell wants to go at its own speed "and that's mightly slow."

In the Phone Shoppe, each phone carries a tag which describes why it is cheaper to buy a phone than rent one from Bell.

For example, the shop says a Contempra push-button model rented from Bell will cost the customer a total of $95.50 in the first year.

In five years, it would add up to $455.50.

The Phone Shoppe sells the Contempra for $119.95.

A basic black phone sells for $50 while the five-year charge by Bell would be $125.50.

Biggar said the average sale in the shop is about $100.

"By buying, you can write off the cost of a $100 phone in about 18 months instead of leasing one from Bell."

Chrysler bail-out inadequate?

DETROIT (AP) — Chrysler Corp. is too optimistic and may need $700 million more than it thinks to become financially healthy, says a draft of a report by a management-consulting firm to a directors' committee.

That is almost equal to the $750 million in federal loan guarantees the cash-strapped auto-maker is seeking.

In its request to the U.S. treasury department for guarantees, Chrysler said it will need from all sources $2.1 billion through 1982.

But the draft prepared by Booz, Allen and Hamilton, Inc. and obtained by The Associated Press said "there are risks that the targets being set in the plans are not feasible due to economic or other factors outside the company's control."

"Consequently we recommend that Chrysler obtain contingent financing for a peak requirement of up to $2.8 billion."

The report, when complete, is to be presented to the treasury department. The treasury forced Chrysler to scale down its original request for loan guarantees to $750 million from $1.2 billion.

Chrysler projections anticipate losses of $1.07 billion this year, $482 million next year and profits of $3.4 billion for the years 1981 through 1985.

Century merging with Trans-world

VANCOUVER (CP) — Century 21, the country's largest real estate sales company, is merging with Trans World Corp. of New York, says Gary Charlwood, president of the firm's Canadian branch.

Charlwood said in a news release that his firm's U.S. parent company, Century 21 Real Estate Corp. of Irvine, Calif., will become a wholly-owned subsidiary of Trans World.

Under the merger, Century 21 shareholders can choose to receive $28.50 in cash for their shares, exchange their shares for an equivalent value of $28.50 in Trans World Series C convertible preferred shares or receive a combination of 40 per cent in Trans World shares and 60 per cent in cash.

B.F. Goodrich expansion set

KITCHENER, Ont. (CP) — B. F. Goodrich Canada Ltd. plans an $11 million project to expand radial tire capacity which will create about 700 jobs in the next two years. The project is part of a $40 investment announced last August to expand the company's radial tire capacity in North America.

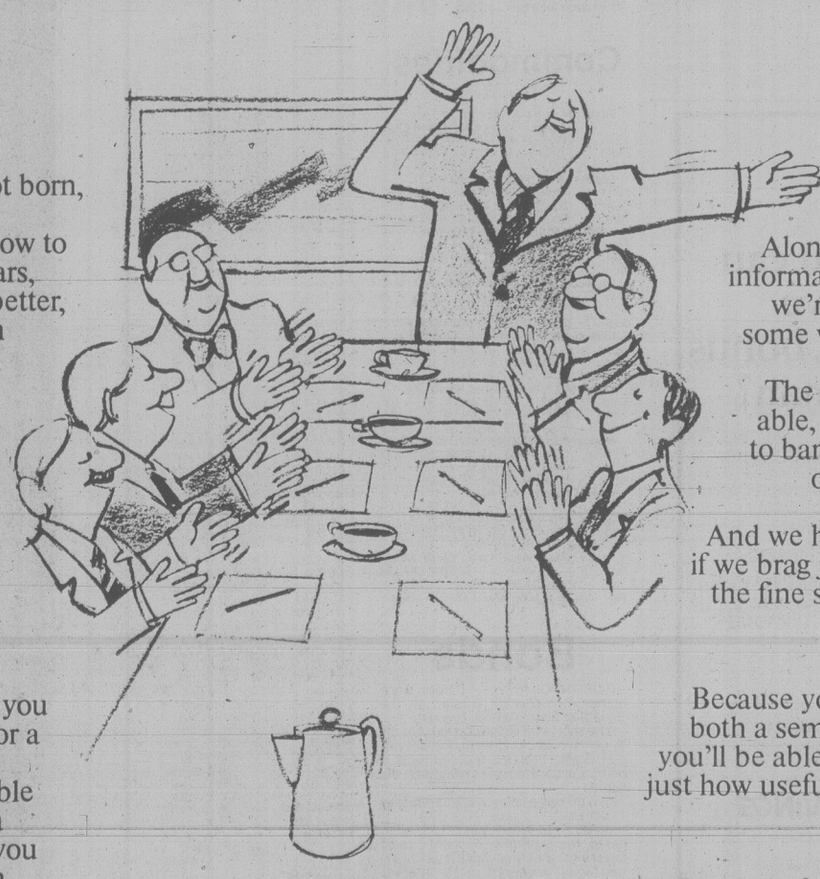
HOW TO PUT MORE WOW IN YOUR POWWOWS.



Good meetings are not born, they're made.

If you'd like to learn how to make your meetings, seminars, conferences, and banquets better, come to our free Seminar on Seminars.

Over the years we've learned a lot about hosting large (and small) gatherings.

And we'd like to give you a piece of our mind.

Because we figure the more you know about the mechanics of meetings, the more you'll appreciate our services.

So we'll show and tell you how to organize a meeting for a thousand. And for a dozen.

Where the most sensible place is to hold it. How big a room you'll need. Whether you should serve food or adjourn to a nearby restaurant. What provisions you should make for coffee. Or other beverages. What kind of audio-visual equipment you'll need. How to set up a message centre to relay emergency communications. And so on.

And now a word from the sponsor.

Along with all the general information about meetings, we're going to pass along some very specific information about ourselves. The rooms we have available, from conference-size to banquet-size. The prices of our various menus. That sort of thing. And we hope you'll pardon us if we brag just a teeny bit about the fine staff we've assembled to serve you.

Judge for yourself.

Because you'll be taking part in both a seminar and a reception, you'll be able to judge for yourself just how useful our knowledge and services can be.

R.S.V.P.

As always, before a meeting like this can take place the organizers must know who is coming. So admission will be by invitation only.

If you would like an invitation please mail the coupon.

Hike in prime not the idea

United Press International

Many big banks raised their prime rate for business loans to a record 15 per cent Tuesday despite pressure from the Federal Reserve to keep a lid on loans instead of hiking the cost.

Most of the top 20 banks in the country — No. 2 Citibank was one exception — followed the lead of fifth-ranked Morgan Guaranty Trust Co.

The banks were responding to a squeeze by the Fed that has pushed to record highs the cost of obtaining funds to lend.

But one New York bank, Sterling National Bank and Trust, which says it ranks 165th among the nation's commercial banks, announced that in keeping with the request of Fed Chairman Paul Volcker, "We are holding prime interest rates down to their present 14.5 per cent to slow the inflationary spiral."

The Fed is known to have had private meetings with leading bankers in an effort to exert pressure in this direction and Volcker indirectly told bankers at their meeting in New Orleans that this is the objective.

"The Fed wants banks to make direct selective cutbacks in their loans, especially in loans made for non-productive purposes such as speculation in the commodities markets or for corporate acquisitions," said David M. Jones, economist for Aubrey G. Lanston & Co.

"The Fed is saying in effect that while the banks were using price to compete earlier, now it wants them to hold back a bit in loans to particular borrowers," Jones said.

The prime rate has no immediate effect on regulated consumer loans, with the exception of mortgage loans in some areas, but banks are being forced to pay more for money than they can charge for these loans and they will become more difficult to obtain.

The less than top-rated or the smaller business borrower could also find it hard to borrow money necessary to finance inventories.

Sterling National's Chairman Theodore H. Silbert says the bank will further "respect the policies" of Volcker by making loans for "normal business requirements . . . not for exotic new lending areas or to finance speculative loans."

Getty gets top spot with E&B Oil and Gas

EDMONTON (CP) — Don Getty, former Alberta energy minister, has been appointed president of the West German-controlled E and B Oil and Gas Ltd.

E and B, which operates in Canada and the United States, is funded by the Nordec Groups in Frankfurt and Munich through their Alberta subsidiary, Minexco Energy Ltd.

Since retiring from politics earlier this year, Getty has accepted several advisory, consulting and board appointments with major companies.

Farmland a labor issue?

VERNON (CP) — British Columbia's labor movement now is organizing a campaign to preserve provincial farmland, an Okanagan Valley union official said Tuesday.

Bert Nilsson, secretary of the Okanagan Labor Council, said he wants labor unions to make preservation of farmland and preservation of the Agricultural Land Commission a major issue.

The campaign could result in the boycotting of companies who attempt to develop land removed from the province's agricultrual land reserve, Nilsson said.

Nilsson said the removal recently of 626 acres near Langley from the reserve by the cabinet's Environmental Land Use Committee was the spark that caused labor to move. The committee over-ruled the Agricultural Land Commission in its decision.

Peace dam tab $1½ billion

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia Hydro's Site C dam on the Peace River will cost at least $1.5 billion, according to a preliminary estimate based on a new electrical demand forecast by Hydro that is two per cent higher than the forecast by the B.C. Energy Commission.

Hydro chairman Robert Bonner made the cost forecast in an interview Tuesday and said the utility's new electrical load growth will increase by under six per cent for the first time in years.

"That's an order of magnitude and that's not a figure that I'd want to be held to because inflation can get out of hand," said Bonner. "We're referring to an energy forecast which I think will be somewhat down from last year in just under six per cent."

The B.C. Energy Commission said Tuesday its projected electrical growth forecast for the same period will be the same as last year's prediction of between 3.5 per cent and 4 per cent.

But comparisons to the $1.5-billion Revelstoke Dam which was justified at the time of building by load growth forecasts of more than 9 per cent don't stand up, Bonner said. Critics said then, and some say now, that Hydro is overbuilding.

If Hydro is over-building, the surplus electricity can be exported to the United States at considerable profit, the chairman said.

"The failsafe aspect of electrical energy production in the country is that there is an enormous and growing demand for electrical energy in the United States," he said.

"And if you do build over-optimistically by one or two years, which is apparently so important to critics, the financial implication of that is that you're apt to make a great deal more money for the customers of Hydro by over-building than you are by under-building."

Bonner said a new provincial energy policy could have an effect on applications for major hydroelectric projects.

"We're awaiting the publication of the province's energy green paper. I don't know what time to make for the application because I think the new energy policy will have a different process as to new project overview analyses."

Site C, located about 6.5 kilometres southwest of Fort St. John, will be a 60-metre high earthfill dam with six generating units with a total capacity of 975 megawatts.

Law to affect 500 families

VANCOUVER (CP) — An estimated 500 families will be affected each year by a British Columbia Supreme Court decision that removes cases dealing with child custody and occupancy of the family home from provincial court jurisdiction.

"It will shift a substantial number of cases from the provincial courts to the higher courts," said Dennis Sheppard, director of provincial court services.

Sheppard said court orders made after the act that came into force March 31 and before the ruling will stand unless one of the parties applies to have it annulled.

Mr. Justice H.E. Hutcheon ruled that B.C. went beyond its jurisdiction in creating three sections of the Family Relations Act that granted provincial courts the power to deal with custody, occupancy of the family home and prevention of one spouse from entering the dwelling. Family court is a division of the provincial courts.

Deputy attorney-general Richard Vogel said the decision will be appealed as soon as possible.

The judge upheld a fourth section of the act that gives provincial court judges the right to order maintenance payments, a decision that pleased provincial Attorney-General Garde Gardom.

Gardom, at a conference in Halifax, said in a telephone interview that he is disappointed with the rest of the decision because it is a setback to the province's attempt to streamline family law.

Victoria lawyer Marney Stevenson, a specialist in family law cases, said the 30-day period for appeals in many cases has expired. Despite the higher court ruling Monday, even those orders that would have been affected will stand if the appeal deadline has passed.

But, Stevenson added, "anyone in the family relations area would have known this test case was pending."

Sheppard said there are more than 1,000 cases a year before the family courts, half of which deal with maintenance. He said about half the cases dealt with both maintenance and other remedies and would be affected.

Those seeking only maintenance orders will continue to use the provincial family courts, but those seeking additional remedies will have to decide whether they want to launch a separate action in higher court or combine it with the request for maintenance in one upper court action.

No snub on radar bid: MoT

VANCOUVER (CP) — A Ministry of Transport official says the federal government did not ignore a request for a second Burrard Inlet radar installation that might have helped to prevent the ramming of the Canadian National Railways bridge.

Creation of a second radar station is a long process, Captain David Johns, chief of the Canadian vessel traffic management section, said Tuesday.

The request, made by the Pacific region of the Coast Guard almost two years ago, is still being processed and the radar may be installed by 1982, he said.

The radar will give precision coverage to the area east of Second Narrows, particularly in the area where the ship Japan Erica collided with the CNR bridge in heavy fog Oct. 12. The area currently is in a radar shadow area.

Some officials believe second radar coverage of the area might have prevented the collision, which has put the bridge out of commission for at least three months, crippling rail traffic in Vancouver harbor.

The Coast Guard is conducting a formal investigation into the collision while eight suits filed as a result of the collision await legal action.

Johns said the request was studied by the ministry and approved in principle last February. Engineering studies are now being planned in Vancouver to determine the best position for a second radar.

Contempt verdict reserved

VANCOUVER (CP) — Chief Justice Allan McEachern of the British Columbia Supreme Court has reserved decision on a charge of contempt of court against open-line broadcaster Gary Bannerman of CKNW and the radio station.

The charge was laid in October, 1978, by the attorney-general's department for remarks made in a broadcast during the drug trial of William Faulder (Fats) Robertson and 14 co-accused. They were later convicted of conspiracy to import cocaine and Robertson was sentenced to 20 years in prison and fined $50,000.

Court was told that Bannerman had referred to other charges brought against Robertson earlier. Under the law, the criminal record of a person charged with an offence cannot be mentioned before a verdict is reached in case it prejudices the judge or jury.

Towboat talks off

VANCOUVER (CP) — Talks aimed at reaching a new contract for licensed officers in the British Columbia towboat fleet broke down Tuesday.

A spokesman for the Canadian Merchant Service Guild which represents 1,000 mates, engineers and captains said after 18 contract meetings the towboat companies have yet to make a wage offer.

The union has applied to the federal labor department to have a conciliation officer appointed.

Shah loses bladder

NEW YORK (UPI) — Doctors today removed the gall bladder of the cancer-stricken shah of Iran in exploratory surgery to determine the extent of his disease, which is called lymphoma.

Robert Armao, the American spokesman for the shah, said a team of surgeons removed the gall bladder in a 2½-hour operation and also took a biopsy of lymph nodes in the monarch's neck.

"Recovery is anticipated if there are no complications," Armao said. "I can't get into technical aspects."

He said the shah had been suffering from lymphoma for about six years and had been undergoing treatment from a team of French doctors. He said the condition had not been disclosed previously because "it was not in the best interests of Iran."

Posh club wiped out by blaze

OTTAWA (CP) — Fire Tuesday destroyed the Rideau Club and damaged the Langevin Block which houses the prime minister's office before a bedazzled audience of thousands gathered on Parliament Hill to watch the spectacular blaze.

The fire engulfed the 68-year-old club, a bastion of Victorian exclusiveness, minutes after the alarm at 5:17 p.m. EDT. None of the 12 injuries among the more than 50 firemen who fought the blaze was considered serious.

Former Gov.-Gen. Roland Michener, the only club member in the building, escaped with staff after smoke was discovered coming from the basement.

Firemen fought late into the night to contain the blaze on the roof of the Langevin Block after sparks leaped across the street between the two buildings. Completed in 1889 and named for Father of Confederation Hector-Louis Langevin, the building houses Prime Minister Clark's office and cabinet staff.

Clark was not in the building as smoke and then flames forced staff busy salvaging valuable documents to evacuate. The government spent more than $4 million in 1976-77 to renovate the building which now has fire damage to half the roof and fourth floor and extensive smoke damage.

Police blocked off three city blocks in front of the Parliament Buildings where MPs and senators continued debate on government financial problems.

Adjacent to but upwind of the blazing club, the U.S. embassy was evacuated and incurred smoke and water damage. Stores along the Sparks Street shopping mall behind the club were flooded. A worker in a branch of Henry Birks jewellery store said the basement was awash in 50 centimetres of water.

The Rideau Club was founded in 1865 by rich Ottawans led by Sir John A. Macdonald. The club has counted prime ministers, Governors-General and royalty among its members.

The club became a bulwark of stately traditions, including a wine and cigar committee and rulings which reprimanded stewards for talking politics or members who stayed too late.

The most controversial of its hallowed traditions fell in painful stages as its all-male aspect slowly crumpled.

Although members had discussed allowing women inside their building from about 1900, it wasn't until 1922 that a separate dining room was built for them — they were not permitted in any other part of the club — and not until 1933 that they were allowed to stay after 7 p.m.

The denouement came, though, just two months ago when Jean Pigott — former MP for Ottawa-Carleton and well-known Ottawa businesswoman — became the first full-fledged woman member of the club.

"I'm sure there will be a lot of gentlemen who'll say I put a jinx on the club," she said when advised of the fire.

The building, worth close to $2.5 million, was covered by insurance, with donated paintings valued at more than $100,000.

Cartoon caption lack crucial: lawyer

By ROGER STONEBANKS

The lack of a caption on a political cartoon a court found libelled former human resources minister Bill Vander Zalm was very important, a Victoria lawyer argued Tuesday before the B.C. Court of Appeal.

Rodney Taylor said the Victoria Times cartoon literally depicted a person who enjoys inflicting suffering and this was false of Vander Zalm as a person or as a cabinet minister.

This made the cartoon an allegation of fact, he said, and therefore the defence of fair comment did not arise.

Taylor was appearing before the court in what will be a landmark decision on political cartoons in newspapers.

Judgment was reserved.

Chief Justice Nathan Nemetz and four other judges will give their written decision later on the Times appeal of a B.C. Supreme Court decision last January which held that a cartoon of Vander Zalm was libellous and awarded him $3,500 damages.

Supreme Court Justice F. Craig Munroe agreed with Vander Zalm that the cartoon, published June 22, 1978, portrayed him as cruel and sadistic. The newspaper said the cartoon was not defamatory, but if it was, then it was fair comment on a matter of public interest.

The captionless cartoon depicted a person picking the wings off flies. The person had a tag pinned on his lapel reading Minister of Human Resources.

The case is almost without precedent and the only case quoted at the trial was a 1911 New Zealand Times cartoon about a member of Parliament. That was found not to be libellous but because it was a jury decision there were no reasons for judgment.

On appeal, one of the judges said politicians ought not to be sensitive even about defamatory matter and must put up with laughing, ridicule and sneering.

But Taylor said that case didn't establish a special category of law for political cartoons but simply on appeal it was held that the jury was justified in finding the cartoon not libellous.

When Chief Justice Nemetz asked how this would apply to a cartoon, Taylor said very simply, by either having a caption or from what the cartoon depicts. There was no difference in law between libel by cartoon and libel by words.

Nemetz said he found this hard to follow and Taylor directed him to a cartoon of former prime minister John Diefenbaker. But that was a humorous cartoon, he said.

If a cartoon merely and fairly depicted over-all conduct, that was not defamatory. But by attributing to Vander Zalm dishonorable and disreputable motives, it fell on the wrong side of the line of defamation, he said.

Taylor also said if someone attributes disgraceful motives, he cannot get away from it by saying he was just talking about the man's public life.

Mr. Justice J.S. Aikens said the cartoon followed a series of controversial actions and a decision to send welfare recipients from Vancouver to their homes.

He asked if what happened was so notorious by Vander Zalm that the cartoonist would not have to give specific information with the cartoon because it was not as if there had been no controversy.

Taylor said it would have been different if the minister was plucking feathers from an Indian headdress and sending Indians home from Vancouver.

Aikens asked again if the reader wouldn't understand that it was a criticism of Vander Zalm in his position as minister as a result of controversy.

Taylor replied that he would agree if it could be said that Vander Zalm was cruel in his attitude to Indians but to allege cruelty generally went too far.

Taylor agreed with Nemetz that the cartoonist can comment if he came to an honest view that Vander Zalm's actions were cruel as a result of a series of controversies, but it was the manner of the depiction in the cartoon that he was concerned with.

Mr. Justice P.D. Seaton said he would have thought that it is not actionable to say of a minister that he is cruel and heartless in his conduct as a whole.

Taylor replied that if an editorial writer said that and it was not true, it was defamatory.

Mr. Justice Aikens said the cartoon was a way of rhetorically making a point, not meant literally, that there was a label on the caricature of Vander Zalm saying Minister of Human Resources, and this suggested that he was cruel in his function as minister.

Taylor said that to call the minister cruel in his public life is to defame him.

He also said that Mr. Justice Munroe, while he may have been subjective in saying "amusing it was not" about the cartoon, did apply the correct objective test in all other respects as to whether it was defamatory.

He quoted a previous case which said morality cannot be separated into a person's public and private lives and there couldn't be two persons and two codes of conduct.

But Mr. Justice E.E. Hinkson said that had to be put into context because that case dealt with rakeoffs and Chief Justice Nemetz said a rakeoff deals with personal as well as public conduct. A man can be cruel in public office but still kiss babies and pat dogs privately, he said.

Hinkson then said he cannot understand how the cartoon applied to Vander Zalm's private life. He pointed to the label Minister of Human Resources in the cartoon and said the average reasonable man would not think Vander Zalm is cruel to his wife, children and dog but his policies as a minister were lacking in sensitivity.

Mr. Justice Seaton commented that he was not sure that to say someone is cruel is so shocking that it is defamatory but Taylor said such an allegation would lower his reputation in the minds of a right-thinking person.

Taylor said the cartoon defamed Vander Zalm in his office as minister by suggesting he was not a fit and proper person to be minister of human resources.

Mr. Justice Seaton then commented humorously that he is sure he has been called cruel and sadistic many times after trials and especially sentencings and if those two words were to be defamatory he could retire on the proceeds of lawsuits.

Don Farquhar, counsel for the Times, asked to comment on the words cruel and sadistic, said the words are often used interchangeably but technically the word sadistic did not apply to this case because it meant a person who got sexual pleasure from cruel acts.

He said many politicians have called legislation cruel and that would reflect on those who voted in favor of it and if that was held to be defamatory a lot of politicians would have a cause for legal action.

The appellants in the case, in addition to the newspaper, are former publisher Stuart Underhill, editorial page editor Barbara McLintock and cartoonist Bob Bierman.

No indication was given by the judges when their decision will be given.

max low

Education was the key, Indian leader Philip Paul said after I'd driven out to his Brentwood home, stepped nimbly over youngsters building things with Leggo on the carpet and asked him to talk a little more about his attack on the provincial government.

Sure, he realized he'd started something when, as vice-president of the Union of B.C. Indian Chiefs, he lashed out during the annual meeting last week at the use of white standards to judge Indians who then lose their children to white foster homes. The provincial government, he charged, is public enemy No. 1.

But Paul, the father of four boys, said the lot of Indians living in a white society is getting worse with increases all the time in alcohol and drug abuse and in suicides. Indians want more jurisdiction over their lives.

"We are not saying we don't have problems," Paul explained. "We know we have problems. But white solutions to Indian problems have never worked ever since we first had contact."

Solutions, he said, lie in changing the education system.

"Under the so-called Master Tuition Agreement, the federal government turns over $30 million yearly to the provinces for the education of status Indians," the chief of the Tsartlip band pointed out.

"We've been involved in the public education system for 30 years and in making a survey of this, the best we can come up with is an eight to 10 per cent success rate," he said.

That's based on the number of Indian children entering Grade 1 and going on to complete Grade 12.

"Investigation of those not making it show they've been involved in broken families, alcoholism, law-breaking and even suicides," Paul said. "And there is nothing that is being done about this by the government in an organized fashion.

"There is no participation of Indians in policy-making decisions in the school system and no cultural content in it either. This is robbing the non-Indian people, too, of the rich history of the Indian people."

Paul said the province has pretty well kept Indians aloof from any kind of policy-making in anything.

"All they've done really is create problems for us through the Child Welfare Act and through the public school system."

A policy statement on Indian education issued recently by the education ministry said it recognizes that native Indian children have not achieved to their full potential within the public schools and therefore considers the goal of parity for native Indian children to be a priority concern.

When it comes to education, though, I'm not sure parity with white children is what the Indians have in mind.

"Today our Indian children have to mould themselves into educational patterns designed for white people," Paul has explained in a policy statement of his own. "There is no way for Indian people to be recognized and accepted for what they are. The provincial school system in B.C. is designed for white middle class people of European descent. We are not white. We are not of European descent and the majority of our people are poor.

"So what they are continuously asking us to do is leave behind all we represent and embrace something we are not. Then they do study upon study as to why we fail and never find an answer.

"I really do believe we've failed — we've failed to become carbon copies of white people. But in the totality of human existence and human survival, we've come through with flying colors and room to spare.

"Our culture has been strong enough to endure over thousands of years and even the strongest thrusts of a technological civilization have been unable to completely destroy us. But it has weakened us and brought a lot of confusion."

The education department's policy statement also boasted that "the ministry encourages the participation of native Indian people in public education" but Paul said this just isn't so.

"They might talk to individual Indians but won't have anything to do with our elected leaders," the chief said. "They know what is needed to better conditions for Indians in the public school system yet they won't allow the Indians to take part in making these changes."

Their inability to respond to Indian needs as far as education is concerned affects everything related to life for the Indian, including unemployment, Paul said.

"More than 58 per cent of employable Indians in this province are unemployed year round, while we're talking of about seven per cent general unemployment in B.C. and around nine per cent nationally.

"Those who run the education system are to blame . . . we have a 30-year span to prove they have failed."

Lacterman paid taxes in full

Victoria businessman Jack Lacterman says he paid his taxes in full soon after the city issued a B.C. Supreme Court writ seeking 1979 taxes and interest penalties of $18,365.83 owed on his property at 762 Yates.

Lacterman objected to the city's new policy of taking property owners to court to force payment of taxes. He said he has always paid his taxes at the end of November, including the interest penalty for being five months late.

But this year, council decided to use the courts to go after delinquent taxpayers who hadn't paid by the end of September.

Lacterman said today he hadn't been informed of the switch in policy, which he criticized as a shabby way of treating the businessmen and developers who have built up the city.

McDermott dumping 'an emotional cause'

The Canadian Union of Public Employees' move to oust Dennis McDermott as president of the Canadian Labor Congress has become an emotional cause, B.C. CUPE president Muriel Overgaard of Victoria said today.

Anti-McDermott feeling is stronger in Ontario and Quebec, she said in an interview, but many B.C. unionists also condemned McDermott for not backing up striking postal workers last year.

She was chairman of the resolutions committee at CUPE's policy convention last week in Quebec and tried to get the anti-McDermott resolution deferred but the delegates overruled the committee and demanded action.

Many delegates, including the 100 from B.C., were upset over the treatment handed out to Jean-Claude Parrot, the leader of the Canadian Union of Postal Workers who got a three-month jail sentence — now under appeal — for refusing to obey a back to work law.

OVERGAARD
. . . B.C. support

"CUPE has always supported the CUPW," said Mrs. Overgaard. "They have a terrific problem and it's not been dealt with fairly."

Parrot spoke to the CUPE convention and everyone felt he had been badly treated by the government and by the CLC leadership, which last year told postal workers to obey the special act of Parliament ordering an end to their strike, she said.

The resolution demanding McDermott's resignation now goes to the executive board of CUPE for action, but Mrs. Overgaard, a member of the board, said she thinks it will probably resurface at the CLC's annual convention in Winnipeg next April.

Soccer-playing girls put pressure on change room

A problem in finding changing room facilities for the growing number of girls wanting to play soccer was driven home to Saanich's parks and recreation committee Tuesday night.

Representatives of the Gorge Soccer Association said although 200 of its 700 young players are girls, there is still only one dressing room at Hampton Park.

The association had originally hoped to build a new building at the park but because of the $300,000 price tag shelved the idea, saying it was beyond their fund-raising capabilities.

Instead it proposes a 1,000-square-foot addition at a cost of $60,000.

The club would pay one third of the costs with the municipality and province sharing the remainder.

Committee chairman Geoff Vantreight deplored the lack of facilities and urged top priority on the project next year.

The committee, however, noting that a major recreation study won't be completed until next June, suggested an interim report be presented to the budget committee in the spring to enable action to be taken on the association's request.

Federal spill study the 'key'

The credibility of a federal environmental assessment of oil spill risks is the key issue of the National Energy Board oil port hearings in Vancouver, David Anderson said today.

Although tanker traffic into Juan de Fuca Strait would increase to 800,000 barrels a day from the present 300,000, Ottawa claims the oil spill risk would not increase, he said.

The federal environment department offsets the hazard because tankers would only come part way into the strait, avoiding the hazardous passage now taken by tankers to refineries at Cherry Point.

The oil port proposal is to build a tanker off-loading station at Low Point, 18 miles west of Port Angeles, about directly south of Sooke, said Anderson, who is appearing at the hearings for the B.C. Wildlife Federation.

This might be desirable for Georgia Strait and Puget Sound, but the oil spill risk for Victoria and Sooke and southern Vancouver Island is still just as high as ever, he said.

Robert Sherwood and John Millen of the environment department are to be grilled by Anderson and other intervenors at the NEB hearings on their report — Comparative Environmental Assessment of West Coast Transportation Alternatives.

Pullan makes it beautiful

By AUDREY JOHNSON

There is a certain danger in establishing a specific theme for a concert — the possibility of over-statement and reiteration to the point of boredom.

But Bruce Pullan's manipulation of Amity Singers' Shakespearean theme . . . "the food of love . . ." works beautifully.

The three-year-old Amity tradition of Songs by Candlelight, presented in the Empress Hotel ballroom and given an old-world touch by the accompaniment of wine and cheese, has a triple play this year. Tuesday's performance will be repeated tonight and Thursday.

The program offers the language of love in song and spoken word; it's Pullan's idea and one that works pleasingly enough to warrant further exploration at another time.

Under the four divisions — Courtly Love, Country Love, Love as it Was and Love as it is — it would be difficult to improve on the choice of material.

To represent the first kind, the 26-voice chorus sings 16th and 17th century madrigals with Pullan interpolating readings from the sonnets and love poems of Shakespeare, Sir Philip Sidney, Kit Marlowe and others of the time.

Country Love and Love as it Was is illustrated mainly by arrangements of traditional songs, and finally comes a group that veers widely, from Debussy to Lennon/McCartney and the jazzy In the Mood.

Pullan, who is conductor of the superb Vancouver Bach Choir as well as professor of voice at Western Washington State College, is basically a finely gifted and superbly trained musician (Kings College, Cambridge and Oxford). But he has qualities that are not always present with the most exemplary musicians; a sense of occasion, humor, an instinct for showmanship.

Showmanship, without the rest, is hollow and as cheap as it sounds. Present with all that Pullan has besides, it is magical.

In fact it is an ingredient that could take a group with as much going for it as Amity beyond merely "good" or even "excellent" to a virtuoso category, given time.

Under Pullan's dynamic leadership the choir has never sounded better. The blend and balance of voices has fine texture and richness; dynamic range has improved, crescendoes and forte passages are handled with virtually no loss of quality. And an important factor — vitality and precision is sustained in the softest and most delicate of passages.

There is a noticeable improvement in diction, words "tripping" off the tongue in Shakespeare-approved fashion. But the most signal development under Pullan is animation which greatly enhances the projection of character and mood.

Bobby Shaftoe, a toe-tip dancing delight, bewitching color of Dashing Away With the Smoothing Iron, the beautifully phrased Just as the Tide Was Flowing can be mentioned only as among the many pleasures of the program.

Pullan turns soloist for the final two modern versions of love — the Lennon-McCartney Yesterday, and In the Mood. His fine resonant voice backed by the choir adds another dimension and a welcome one to the evening.

Readers of the wide range of verse were Pullan and young Victoria actress Shauna Baird. The latter is charming and reads well, particularly in taking the female responses in such verses as Oh No John, No John. As yet she is less at home with the more introspective and mature expressions; Elizabeth Barrett Browning's How Do I Love Thee, for example.

Tribute to Gracie

A second concert by the Victoria Conservatory Salon Orchestra will be presented Friday at the Conservatory, Craigdarroch Castle.

The program of light music and song will pay a tribute to renowned British entertainer Gracie Fields, who died recently.

Soprano Deborah Millar will sing some of the songs that Miss Fields made famous, including In My Little Bottom Drawer, Now is the Hour, and Walter, Walter Lead Me to the Altar.

Also on the program which begins at 8 p.m., is music by Mozart, Sir Arthur Sullivan and Franz Lehar.

Admission is $2 for adults and $1 for students and senior citizens.

COMMERCIAL/RETAIL LENDERS

More and more, the business community is hearing about us. Now, we'd like to hear from you.

No more neurotics

NEW YORK (AP) — "I've had enough of playing neurotic heavy parts," says Malcolm McDowell, star of Time After Time, a comedy-thriller in which he plays H.G. Wells and chases Jack the Ripper through time from 19th-century England to 1979 San Francisco.

"This is a very different role for me," said McDowell, best known for A Clockwork Orange, in which he played a sadistic hoodlum. "One would expect me to be Jack the Ripper," said the 36-year-old British actor. "It was difficult to play such a light character, full of charm and whimsy."

McDowell said pacing of the script of Time After Time didn't allow much room for research or character development. "There were certain things required of the character to move the story along. We call it 'shoe leather,'" he said. "It just tells the story, and anything else you can get is a plus."

In 1971, McDowell made a film with director Stanley Kubrick that changed his life. "I'm much more objective now about A Clockwork Orange," said McDowell, "but at the time I resented it."

McDowell said he spent a year creating the character of Alex experimenting with new techniques and running the full range of emotions. But after he saw a print of the film, he said he was upset.

"Kubrick had cut it so I couldn't see much of my character, McDowell said.

Then the film opened in New York, and to McDowell's astonishment, his phone in London rang all night. But with the acclaim came problems McDowell said he wasn't prepared to deal with.

"The part was so strong, people began seeing me as the hoodlum I portrayed," he said. "I really resented that."

Meteor—menacing film villain

scott's world
by vernon scott

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Meteor is the definitive disaster film in which all life on earth is threatened by a five-mile-wide chunk of mineral hurtling from outer space on a collision course with this celestial paradise.

The new action film features meteor splinters which cause an Alpine avalanche, wiping out St. Moritz, a tidal wave which drowns Hong Kong and a collision with Manhattan which flattens the Big A.

It also scares hell out of a yak rancher in the upper reaches of Siberia.

Inevitably, the special effects, opticals and hardware are the stars of this $16 million science-fact American International Picture which is based on a Massachusetts Institute of Technology project.

The superlative pyrotechnics overshadow the all-star cast which includes Natalie Wood, Sean Connery, Karl Malden and Brian Keith in a story of collaboration between United States and Soviet scientists attempting to head off the meteor before it strikes earth.

Special effects took 18 months, longer than principal photography, after Meteor filming was completed. All manner of complications delayed the filmmakers who attempted to create a sense of speed and villainy to the approaching menace from outer space.

Said Sam Arkoff, president of AIP, "The problem was the meteor itself. Giving it the illusion of great speed in space was a difficult thing to accomplish because of the vast spacial relationships."

"There was also the almost impossible sequence of destroying the meteor in space," said producer Sandy Howard.

The meteor is disintegrated in spectacular fashion by a combination of hits from skylab-type Soviet and American satelites which fire atomic warhead missiles at the approaching visitor.

Jere Henshaw, executive in charge of production, said, "In effect, we had two movies. The one involving human relationships as the meteor approaches and the technical aspects of the special effects."

Henshaw said Meteor's opticals were made after the film, complicating the production by having the players react and respond to disasters which they could not see nor really comprehend.

"When you make a picture of this nature, the technical effects should be designed from one to three years in advance of production, spending a couple of million dollars in the process," Henshaw said.

"You're better off shooting the special effects first, giving the actors and director a big advantage. Also, if the effects don't work out, you can junk the picture before you spend more millions on the film itself."

In the disaster films performances are secondary to the special effects, as with Star Wars, Towering Inferno and Close Encounters.

Meteor stars responded differently to the curious situation of reacting to unseen terrors. Connery, an old James Bond hand, was more accustomed to such carryings-on than Wood, who had never appeared in a large, visual science saga.

"I liked the grandiose proportions of this film," said Connery who plays the space scientist in charge of diverting the meteor. "I had to make some accomodations, imagining what horrors took place as the splinters struck earth.

"As an actor you must look as if you know what you're doing and maintain an outward calm. The worst aspect for me was working in the subway with all the smoke and mud from the the meteor splinter strikes.

"The tempo and the rhythm of the picture was, of course, affected by the special effects which can be heightened or diminished after production."

Wood, who plays a Soviet translator in the film, and who accepted the role because of her own Russian background and the opportunity to speak Russian, was less enthusiastic about taking a back seat to special effects.

"I don't find disaster films as satisfying as conventional movies from an acting point of view," said Natalie.

"I piefer intimate movies that concentrate on characterization. They give an actress more to work with. There's a danger in overreacting on camera to special effects that haven't even been filmed yet.

"So you have to rely on your director (Rald Neame). It's frustrating to know the nature of the film doesn't allow for fuller exposition."

Now it's Dionne as Kings' leader

By The Canadian Press

With all the talk about linemate Charlie Simmer early in the National Hockey League season, Los Angeles Kings' centre Marcel Dionne decided Tuesday night was the appropriate time to move back into the spotlight.

Dionne moved with flair against Colorado Rockies, scoring four goals while leading his club to a 7-4 victory.

Oddly enough Dionne, the NHL's leading scorer with six goals and 12 assists, hit the post on his first shot but didn't get discouraged.

"Sometimes you get a little goal-hungry," said Dionne. "I've been having a lot of chances but they weren't going in until tonight."

"When I missed that first chance, I just to myself, 'Tough luck. I'll just have to work harder,' " Dionne said.

Dionne ended the night with an incredible nine of the Kings' 31 shots on goal.

In other NHL games, St. Louis Blues rallied to tie Boston Bruins 5-5, Montreal Canadiens defeated Atlanta Flames 5-3 and Edmonton Oilers earned their fourth tie of the young season, 3-3 against the stumbling New York Islanders.

Dionne opened the scoring at 7:13 of the first period while sprawled on the ice 10 feet in front of the Colorado goal. He said his best goal was on a power play at 8:11 of the second period, when he took the puck from a pass from Butch Goring and fired a wrist shot past Colorado goalie Hardy Astrom.

He scored his third goal seven minutes later, and it proved to be the game winner.

Dionne's final goal was unassisted at 7:38 of the final period.

Wayne Babych scored three goals as the Blues overcame a four-goal deficit.

Mike Zuke and Joe Micheletti also scored for St. Louis while Jean Ratelle and Bobby Schmautz, each with two, and Al Secord replied for the Bruins.

Steve Shutt scored two goals to lead the Canadiens.

Shutt got his first goal at 2:33 of the first period when a shot by Brian Engblom brushed him on its way past Atlanta goalie Dan Bouchard, tying the score at 1-1.

Shutt's second goal came at 7:24 of the second period when he drilled a shot from near the blue line.

Atlanta had taken a quick lead on Darcy Rota's goal.

Guy Lafleur put the Canadiens ahead for good at 11:59 of the first period. Goals by Doug Risebrough and Larry Robinson and the second one by Shutt, all in the second period, gave Montreal a 5-1 lead. But Eric Vail and Kent Nilsson scored for the Flames to cut the margin.

Billy Harris scored his fifth goal of the year on a rebound from Bryan Trottier with 1:17 left in the game to lift the Islanders into a 3-3 tie.

Peter Driscoll scored his first goal of the year six minutes earlier, staking the Oilers to a brief 3-2 lead. Driscoll scored 14 seconds after the Islanders had tied it 2-2 at 12:24 of final period on a goal by Clark Gillies.

Gillies scored two goals for the Islanders, his first on a power play at 9:55 of the first period to tie the score 1-1.

Bill Flett opened the scoring for Edmonton in the first period Blair MacDonald scored his eighth goal of the season to give the Oilers a 2-1lead in the second period.

PUCK IS ELUSIVE ITEM for Bob Jansch of Victoria Cougars as he skates unmolested in front of Seattle goalie Ken Hodge during Western Hockey League game Tuesday night at Memorial Arena. Jansch later scored third-period goal that broke 1-1 tie and Cougars went on for 3-1 victory over Breakers.

Barry keeps Cougars on track to ninth win

Barry Pederson might not agree, but the plucky Victoria Cougars' centre was the standout Tuesday night in a 3-1 Western Hockey League win over Seattle Breakers at Memorial Arena.

Pederson, who has been playing with torn ligaments in his ankle for the past two weeks, said after the game he didn't feel he played that well.

But it was his work in the final period which helped Victoria record its ninth straight victory in an unbeaten season.

Pederson picked up an assist and boosted his points streak to 14 games (including the final five league games last season) on the go-ahead goal at 10:53.

After carrying the puck from mid-ice deep into Seattle territory, Pederson slipped a pass to Greg Adams. The large winger drew goaltender Ken Hodge to his knees and passed the puck to Bob Jansch, who fired it home for his third goal in two games.

Then, 26 seconds later with the cheers for Jansch's goal still echoing in the rafters, Brad Yachimec fired a shot which deflected under Hodge's pads for the insurance tally.

Rookie Mark Morrison scored the first Cougar goal on a second-period power play while Joe Ward was credited with the lone Seattle goal earlier in the same frame.

Ward's pass across the goalmouth was accidently deflected past Cougar goaltender Kevin Eastman by defenceman Mark Robinson.

Eastman, who is still looking for his first WHL shutout since joining the club midway through last season, finished up the evening with 22 saves, lowering his goals-against average to a league-leading 1.67.

Victoria coach Jack Shupe, however, wasn't totally thrilled with the victory by the only unbeaten club in the league.

"We seem to play at the level of the other team," he explained. "We're up for Lethbridge here on Saturday but then don't seem to take Seattle seriously. It was probably the poorest we've played. But it's a win."

A combination of poor passing, hesitant shooting and lacklustre skating plagued Cougars during the first two periods before the club settled down for the final 20 minutes.

Cougars, who next take on New Westminster Bruins in an 8:30 p.m. contest Saturday at Memorial Arena, are now six points ahead of runner-up Portland Winter Hawks in the Western Division.

The results of Tuesday's other two contests tightened the league's Eastern Division standings. The Blades got three third-period goals to edge the Medicine Hat Tigers 6-5 in Saskatoon while Calgary Wranglers romped 9-1 over Brandon Wheat Kings.

Medicine Hat, Calgary and Brandon now are tied for second place with 12 points, two behind Lethbridge Broncos. Saskatoon has 10 points, two more than fifth-place Regina Pats.

Lord Hubert one of six horses nominated for Times Handicap

Headed by Lord Hubert, winner of the Colonist Handicap, a field of six has been nominated for Saturday's Capital City Turf Club's running of the $2,500 added Times Handicap over 6½ furlongs at Sandown Park.

The others are Never Charges Jr., In Strong Hands, Power Cell, Garfield, and Sweet and Discrete.

Never Charges Jr. was second to Lord Hubert in the Colonist, will likely drop weight from the high of 124 he carried last week and will be back at his best distance.

Power Cell, however, would appear to be the early favorite. The three-year old is a winner of five, including a couple at Longacres, and over $15,000 this year

Garfield is a late-closing Kentucky-bred owned by Fraser McColl of Victoria and trained by Dave Forster. In Strong Hands has been running in the high claimers at Ex-Park while Sweet And Discrete is a speedy filly which would appreciate a fast strip.

Flip destroys Miss Bud in bid for speed record

SEATTLE (AP) — The Miss Budweiser, with driver Dean Chenoweth aboard, flipped on Lake Washington Tuesday while trying to set a water speed record for unlimited hydroplanes, authorities said.

Chenoweth, who was taken to Harborview Medical Centre, was talking after the incident and complained of rib pain. A Harborview spokeswoman said Chenoweth suffered fractured ribs and possible internal injuries.

The boat, which was destroyed, was on what might have been a record run when it flipped, witnesses said.

Ron Jones, designer of the Miss Budweiser, said the boat appeared to be moving about 215 miles an hour. The record is 200.419 m.p.h., set by Roy Duby in Miss U.S. I in 1962.

An eyewitness, Kim Bird, said the boat was headed away from Sand Point and toward Kenmore, at the north end of the 16-mile-long lake, at the time of the accident.

"She was kicking, really kicking, and apparently she hit something . . . it flipped straight up in the air and bounced about four times," she said. "The driver, he flew out and slid about 200 feet."

Bobby Hull didn't show at workout

WINNIPEG (CP) — Retired star Bobby Hull did not make an expected appearance Tuesday at a workout held by Winnipeg Jets of the National Hockey League.

Club information director Ken Fenson said Hull could not make the practice because of business.

Fenson said Hull, who retired from professional hockey last November, plans to work out with the club sometime this week.

Some familiar stars on free-agent list

NEW YORK (AP) — Thirty-seven baseball players have declared for free ageney, Marvin Miller, executive director of the Major League Players' Association, has announced.

But the number can go up or down between now and next Monday — three days before the annual re-entry draft of veteran players.

Eligible players — even those who previously have declared for the draft — still can sign with their old clubs up to 72 hours before the draft. After Monday, however, the rosters are locked in until the draft is completed.

Among the major leaguers who have told Miller's office they plan to go through the draft procedure were a number of familiar names, including shortstop Bucky Dent of New York Yankees, most-valuable-player in the 1978 World Series, reliever Al Hrbosky and shortstop Fred Patek of Kansas City Royals, and pitchers Dave Goltz of Minnesota, Rudy May of Montreal and Rick Wise of Cleveland.

The list also includes infielder Rennie Stennett of the World Series champion Pittsburgh Pirates; relief pitcher Don Stanhouse of the American League champion Baltimore Orioles; second baseman Joe Morgan, pitcher Fred Norman and outfielder Paul Blair of the National League West champion Cincinnati Reds, and pitcher Nolan Ryan of the American League West champion California Angels.

Among others who have declared their intentions of going the re-entry route were outfielder Roy White, first baseman George Scott, pitcher Don Hood and utilityman Lenny Randle of the Yankees; outfielder Jose Cruz of Houston; outfielder-first baseman Jay Johnstone of San Diego; pitchers Skip Lockwood and Andy Hassler and first baseman Ed Kranepool of New York Mets; infielder Jorge Orta of Chicago White Sox, and designated hitter Willie Horton and utility infielder Bobby Valentine of Seattle Mariners.

Still considering free agency but not yet declared were veterans Tony Perez of Montreal, Bob Watson of Boston, Willie McCovey of San Francisco and Bruce Kison of Pittsburgh.

Among the players who have passed up the draft and signed with their old teams were pitchers J. R. Richard of Houston, Mike Caldwell of Milwaukee and Montreal's Bill Lee, and catcher Brian Downing of California.

Bruins trade for Lalonde

ATLANTA (AP) — Atlanta Flames announced today that veteran forward Bobby Lalonde has been traded to Boston Bruins for future considerations.

Lalonde, 28, a first-round draft choice of Vancouver in 1971, signed with the Flames as a free agent in September, 1977.

Lalonde has scored 110 goals, including a career high of 24 last season.

Fastnet race rescue efforts cost $752,500

LONDON (AP) — The Fastnet yacht race disaster, in which 15 yachtsmen died and dozens had to be rescued from the sea, cost the British government $752,500, the trade department has reported.

The main costs were for Royal Navy helicopters, aircraft and rescue craft.

The rescue operation was launched Aug. 13 when the 300-yacht fleet was hit by 60-knot winds and 30-foot waves off the southwest coast of Britain.

American skipper Ted Turner of Atlanta eventually won the 605-mile race.

Blazers pad streak despite late heroics

By Associated Press

Cotton Fitzsimmons doesn't plan any vacations in Portland. In fact, he'd just as soon not make any business trips to the Rose City, either.

"It's damn tough to win here. I'm getting tired of it," said Fitzsimmons, coach of Kansas City Kings. Not even a trio of three-point goals by Kansas City's Otis Birdsong in the final 90 seconds could keep the Kings from dropping a 90-88 decision to Portland Trail Blazers on Tuesday night.

The Blazers are now 7-0, the best start in their 10 seasons in the National Basketball Association. Five of the victories have come at the Portland Memorial Coliseum, where the Blazers have played before 105 consecutive sellouts of 12,666.

In other NBA games, Milwaukee Bucks beat Phoenix Suns 114-108, San Antonio Spurs stopped Boston Celtics 129-120, San Diego Clippers defeated Denver Nuggets 132-127, Los Angeles Lakers downed Utah Jazz 102-87, Chicago Bulls edged New Jersey Nets 108-103, New York Knicks trounced Indiana Pacers 136-112 and Atlanta Hawks beat Cleveland Cavaliers, 121-111.

Portland, which has held its opponent under 90 points five times this season, was leading 88-79 with 1:46 remaining when Birdsong began firing from long range.

"It's only a desperation thing," he said. "We didn't set up for them, we just took them. I happened to be in the right spot."

Birdsong led all scorers with 29 points and Phil Ford added 20 points and 11 assists for Kansas City.

Lloyd Free scored 11 of his 32 points in the first quarter as San Diego exploded for 40 points and went on to a hand the winless Nuggets their sixth stright loss. David Thompson had 36 points for the losers.

San Diego again played without center Bill Walton, who was scheduled to have his ailing left foot examined today in Los Angeles. The injury has kept him out of all of San Diego's seven games.

Los Angeles clinched its victory with a 14-5 burst to start the final period, opening up a commanding 86-70 lead. Kareem Abdul-Jabbar and Michael Cooper led the Lakers' balanced attack with 17 points apiece.

Lucas off list

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Forward Maurice Lucas has been removed from the National Basketball Association injured reserve list Tuesday after starting to practice for the first time this season with Portland Trail Blazers.

Dick didn't please all

MONTREAL (CP) — Reaction was mixed Tuesday as members of Montreal Expos learned that manager Dick Williams had been named National League baseball's manager-of-the-year in a poll conducted by Associated Press.

"Let's just say I'm glad the players gave him a chance to win it," said pitcher Steve Rogers, who rarely spoke to Williams during the course of Montreal's most successful season in its history.

"There were many negative influences in terms of his personality and it doesn't seem right to reward a negative influence with a positive award," Rogers added.

Reliever Elias Sosa, meanwhile, viewed the honor differently.

"Dick did a heckuva job for us," he said. "He made a lot of good moves and contributed to a lot of wins."

But outfielder Warren Cromartie said that the players were responsible for most of those victories.

"I think Dick could have done a lot more for the club," said Cromartie. "We had a lot of opportune times to win games early in the season if he had made some moves, but he sat back and let things happen."

Latest 4 x 4 import tiny but impressive

One over-riding impression after putting the pint-sized Suzuki four-wheel-drive vehicle through some rigorous paces one day last week was that this vehicle recaptures some of the pure joy associated with driving off-road.

Like a sports car, it's impractical in many ways. But by the same token, this new introduction to Canada is fun.

Powered by a 41 horsepower overhead cam engine, the Suzuki weighs a mere 1,700 pounds (1,800 for the hardtop) and is both shorter and narrower than the familiar Jeep CJ-5.

The test run involved driving over the Malahat, through Shawnigan Lake and up a deserted road (creek bed?) behind the Burnt Bridge area on the Koksilah River.

On the highway, one major problem is immediately apparent.

Top speed is 80 kph with the pedal on the metal and the engine screaming. It's definitely not something you'd want to drive any great distance without ear muffs. Introduction of a fifth overdrive gear would be a definite advantage.

For the comfort-conscious, the bucket seats are excellent and there's ample room inside for two people and a bit of gear. But don't expect to pack any great payloads. The maximum loading capacity is 550 pounds for the soft-top and 440 pounds for the hardtop.

Visibility is excellent, especially over the front hood — an important point while topping hills.

The nimble steering and narrow track enables the Suzuki to thread through spots which would mangle the sides, rip soft-tops or scratch the paint on other vehicles and while the rear-mounted gas tank is a little vulnerable, all of the major steering components are tucked up underneath out of the way of stray boulders. Another major advantage is the sealed ignition system, which keeps on running even when deluged with water or mud.

It overcame a multitude of obstacles, including rock faces, loose dirt, deep ditches, steep slopes (including a 45-degree gravel pitch) and loose rock before being defeated by a mud hole created by a logging company to block access into an old cutting area. Lucky I checked the depth of the mudhole before trying to run through it. Firm ground was beyond reach of a five-foot branch.

Lack of a no-spin differential, however, could lead to problems in some off-road situations and drivers expecting a crisp stick shift will be disappointed.

The floor-mounted shift lever is attached to the gearbox with a short linkage system which doesn't feel precise. But that's a point you could overlook.

Another factor to consider is the gasoline milage, which will become increasingly important.

Manufacturer claims of 35 miles per gallon couldn't be confirmed in the short time available. But the test vehicle was run for nearly five solid hours, both on the highway and over some pretty rugged off-road areas, for $3 worth of regular fuel.

And, in that department, the Suzuki is unmatched.

NIBBLES: Art Twomey, a mountaineer, skier, geologist and professional photographer, will be making a presentation entitled "Explore the Purcell Wilderness" tonight at 8 in the Newcombe Auditorium.

PGA sets new tour project

LAKE BUENA VISTA, Fla. (AP) — A pilot plan that may lead to a drastic change in the pro golf tour was approved for the 1980 season at a meeting of the PGA tour policy board Tuesday night.

The plan is the first step in what may lead to a split of the tour into two levels of competition, a major and minor circuit.

The board approved establishment of four qualifying tour events in the summer of 1980. Two of these tournaments will be held on the same dates as the Colonial National Invitation in Fort Worth, May 15-18, and the Memorial in Dublin, Ohio, May 22-25.

The exact dates of the other two tournaments have not been set, but PGA tour commissioner Deane Beman indicated they will be either immediately before or immediately following the Colonial and Memorial.

Under the plan, the major tour events opposite the new Qualifying Tour tournaments will become, at least for one year, invitational tournaments. Players not eligible for the major tour invitationals will be eligible for the Qualifying Tour tournaments.

Sites have not been selected but Beman mentioned a number of potential host cities — Oklahoma City, Tulsa, Birmingham, Indianapolis, Buffalo, Pittsburgh.

The plan calls for a minimum of $100,000 in prize money for each of the four new Qualifying Tour tournaments, with the PGA tour "a major underwriter," Beman said.

Winners of each of the four qualifying tournaments, and the first five money-winners from those tournaments will gain an exemption from qualifying for the major tour for 12 months, Beman said.

The establishment of the four Qualifying Tour events is in response to a study the board conducted on the feasibility of splitting the PGA tour into two levels of competition — a major tour of some 30-35 tournaments for the top 100 or so players, and the Qualifying Tour with a maximum of 30 tournaments for all other players.

Should the Qualifying Tour become a reality, provisions would be made for the leading players from that tour to move to the major circuit, with a certain number of players from the major tour dropping back to the Qualifying Tour on an annual basis.

"We'll take a look at the success of these four qualifying events andthen next year the board will make a decision on the direction in which we'll proceed," Beman said.

China problem aired today

NAGOYA, Japan (Reuter) — The International Olympic Committee recognized the Arab country of Bahrain as a member and agreed Tuesday to sign a contract with the American Broadcasting Co. to televise the 1984 Olympic Games in Los Angeles.

Monique Berlioux, an IOC director, said the Chinese question, involving Peking and Taipei, was not studied at the opening of the three-day meeting of the IOC executive board Tuesday and will be discussed today.

Berlioux said the admission of Bahrain brought the number of national olympic committees recognized by the IOC to 135.

She also said Peter Ueberroth, president and managing director of the Los Angeles organizing committee, would come to Nagoya to sign the TV pact Thursday.

The main aim of the three-day meeting is to reach a final formula whereby both China and Taiwan can compete in the 1980 Winter and Summer Olympic Games.

But Taiwan insists that a recommendation drafted in San Juan, Puerto Rico, last June was unacceptable.

Lawrence Ting, vice-president of the Republic of China Olympic Committee, said Monday the IOC recommendation violates the Olympic charter.

He also said the IOC proposal for a change in the name, flag and anthem of his country was against the constitution of the Republic of China.

Informed sources, however, said IOC president Lord Killanin and the six attending executives were expected to push for Peking's participation in next year's Olympics despite Taiwan's protest.

Games costs to jump $50M

NAGOYA, Japan (AP) — The cost of the 1980 Winter Olympics at Lake Placid, N.Y., has risen to $150 million from $100 million, the executive board of the International Olympic Committee (IOC) was told today.

A delegation from Lake Placid, led by the Rev. Bernard Fell, reported the total cost of the Games has, in actuality, risen only slightly since the $100 million figure was suggested five years ago.

"We told the executive board we were satisfied with this (increase)," Fell said. "Inflation is the major cause of the increase, plus we were required by law to build certain roads and other things."

At the same time, the executive board was told some 400,000 foreign visitors are expected in Moscow for next year's Olympic Games — the greatest number ever to visit the Soviet Union at one time.

Vitaly Smirnov, vice-president of both the IOC and the Moscow Organizing Committee, reported that planned for the period of the Games are nearly 1,500 concerts, 450 plays, 450 circus performances and 144 operas and ballets. The artists will include 35 orchestras, 40 variety groups, 16 major folk groups and eight choirs. "There will be free invitations to all athletes and members of the Olympic family to see performances at the Bolshoi ballet," he said.

He said foreign visitors will be able to use credit cards at hotels, restaurants and shops.

Thistles streak hits 11

Mt. Douglas Thistles continued to steamroll the opposition Tuesday, tripping Oak Bay Bays 6-3 in a first divison match of the Greater Victoria High School Boys' Soccer League.

The win boosted Thistles' unbeaten streak to 11 games and pushed them six points ahead of idle runner-up Victoria Tyees.

In the other first-division tussle, Reynolds Roadrunners vaulted into sole possession of third place by edging Spectrum, 3-2.

Belmont Braves topped Stelly's Stingers 7-3 and Parkland Panthers nudged Esquimalt Dockers 2-1 in second-division play.

The Thistle attack was well balanced with goals coming from Denis Mamic, Dave Niddrie, Mark Crisp, Richard Stebeck, Hugh Owen and Rob Wallace. Mark Wyatt (2) and Neil Antolin replied for Bays, who trailed 3-1 at half time.

Greg Pynn, Kerry Taylor and Bob Brown scored for Roadrunners while Glen Jay and Mark Jackson countered for Spectrum.

Ken Wallace led the Belmont offence with three goals, Mark Wilson fired two and singles were chipped in by Guy Ormiston and Rob Leggett. Bob Schubak, Jim Bailey and Bob Nordstrom replied for Stingers.

Parkland's goals were scored by Gordon Fox and Pat Stetchman. Parkland also scored in their own goal.

Daytona 500 money hiked

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Drivers in next year's Daytona 500 stock-car race will compete for $665,550 in prize money.

Bill France, president of the International Speedway Corp., said the 22nd annual race, annually the year's richest for stock car drivers, will offer $70,450 more than last year's race. The Daytona 500 is scheduled for Feb. 17.

Skillings rink pads streak

The Steve Skillings rink won its fourth straight game and remained undefeated in the men's Harley Davidson Series of Curling at the Racquet Club Tuesday with a 6-1 victory over a rink skipped by Barry Moore (1-3).

Don Matheson and Bruce Coulter are tied for second, each with 3-1 records. Matheson defeated Barry Harvey (1-3) 7-6, while Coulter downed Brad Clarke (1-3) 7-3.

In other games, Al Frame (2-2) won from Tim Horrigan (2-2) 10-5 and Bob Hawkes (2-2) defeated Bill Morris (1-3) 9-2.

Mt. Doug wins power struggle

Mt. Douglas won the battle of the powers in the Greater Victoria High School Girls' Volleyball League Monday with a 15-8, 15-7 victory over Spectrum.

The result left Mt. Douglas undefeated at 8-0 and Spectrum with an 8-1 mark. Mt. Douglas has a game in hand.

Spectrum is the defending B.C. champion.

Playing a key role for the winners were Kelly Meechan and Jill Fogner.

In other league games, Edward Milne defeated Stelly's 15-9, 15-12, Esquimalt downed Vic High 15-11, 15-11, and Oak Bay came from behind to defeat Claremont 8-15, 15-13, 16-14.

In boys' action, Oak Bay defeated Claremont, 15-8, 15-2, to move into a first-place tie with Mt. Douglas.

Vic High defeated Esquimalt 15-7, 7-15, 15-11 and Dunsmuir defeated Parkland 15-5, 13-15, 15-13.

Lecture added to grant

Provincial Secretary Hugh Curtis gave the British Columbia Amateur Hockey Association a lecture along with a grant Tuesday.

He told the BCAHA he is concerned about violence, which he feels is becoming a serious problem in hockey across Canada.

Curtis said he recognized that the BCAHA does not condone violence, but the seed of this regrettable aspect of the sport is found in some teams.

The minister, in giving the BCAHA a $44,000 grant, said he wants to meet with the president of the association to discuss the problem.

Attorney-General Garde Gardom said earlier his ministry would take whatever action is necessary to put a stop to hockey violence in the junior ranks.

Braves keep rolling

Saanich Braves rolled to their eighth straight victory in the South Island Junior "B" Hockey League Tuesday with an 11-6 victory over Juan de Fuca Gulls at George Pearkes Arena.

Marty Irvine led the Saanich scoring parade with three goals while Scott Connors and Ron Brooks each had a pair.

Bob Carey, Shawn Connors, Greg Bertrand and Tracy Patterson got the other goals for the Braves.

Dan Houston scored three goals for the Gulls. Mike Wiedeman, Frank Wendt and Bill Kersch had singles.

Goalkeeper Randy Vowels was a busy man for the Gulls as he stopped 54 shots. Ron Allan and Marty Wakelyn combined for 27 saves for Braves. Score was tied at 2-2 at the end of the first period with Saanich going ahead 7-4 after two.

Kerr leads Royal Roads past UVic

Steve Kerr set the pace by scoring four tries and kicking three conversions for 22 points Tuesday as Royal Roads bounced University of Victoria Norsemen 34-19 in a Vancouver Island Rugby Union second division match.

Dave Harris added two tries for Royal Roads and Dave Rector contributed one four-pointer.

David Elrond led Norsemen with two tries, Richard Hudson added one and Al Gray booted a penalty goal and two conversions.

Fittipaldi buys Wolf racing team

LONDON (AP) — Brazilian motor racing driver Emerson Fittipaldi has purchased the Walter Wolf Racing team.

The two-time world champion now will enter two cars in next year's Grand Prix championship, one driven by Fittipaldi, one by a driver to be named.

Walter Wolf Racing, owned by Montreal millionaire Walter Wolf, had little success this year. James Hunt retired, and his replacement, Keke Rosberg, made little impression.

A spokesman for Wolf has confirmed the deal.

Finnish bowler leads World Cup

BANGKOK (Reuter) — Helsinki businessman Antti Poulakkà surprised the more fancied contenders by taking the lead in the tenpin bowling World Cup Tuesday.

The 34 year-old Finnish champion found his best form early in the eight-game session to finish with 1,599 pins.

Poulakka was followed by Indonesian Hadi Purnomo and Juergen Pelz of West Germany with 1,585 and 1,584.

Poulakka opened with 218, followed with a brilliant 255 and had two further 200-plus games.

Canadian champ Bob Puttick of Calgary was in 23rd place with a 1,420 total.

Anna-Liisa Saarinen, a 50-year-old secretary from Finland, led the women's division with a 1,562 total.

VIOLENCE ON UPSURGE IN ENGLISH LEAGUE SOCCER

Con-trick growing menace

LONDON (AP) — Violence is on the upsurge in English League soccer. Nine players have been sent off in First Division matches this season as against four at the same stage last year.

Three were sent off Saturday, a day of controversy that also saw 21 First Division players booked and five penalties handed out.

The immediate result was mud-slinging on a big scale. Players were quick to point fingers at each other while managers sought to absolve their charges from any blame.

Yet on a day in which punches were thrown in at least three of the 11 senior matches, and Gary Chivers of Second Division Chelsea was ejected for butting an opponent, someone has to be guilty.

Bob Wilson, the former Arsenal and Scotland goalkeeper who now is a respected broadcaster and journalist, said: "The referees are partly to blame. If they knew the game well enough and spent more time training at professional clubs, they would not get so many decisions wrong."

But Saturday's ejections all seemed pretty clear cut. Liverpool's Terry McDermott and Chelsea's Gary Stanley both were involved a brawl among a dozen or so players, while Tottenham's Paul Miller knocked Leeds' Ray Hankin to the ground in an off-the-ball incident.

"Players, managers and coaches cannot complain too bitterly when decisions go against them, because they often condone cheating," says Wilson.

Cheating, or "conning the ref" as the professionals call it, is a growing menace in the English League.

An uproar followed the televised match between Manchester United and Ipswich in which Mickey Thomas of United appeared to "dive" in a successful attempt to earn a penalty.

Thomas's team-mate, Lou Macari, admitted after the match that Thomas is "a great little diver" while Thomas himself has been quoted as saying: "Sure, I dive sometimes, but only to avoid injury."

Thomas's admission underlines one of the problems facing referees. The con-trick now has become so common in English soccer that it is desperately difficult for officials to decide what is accidental and what is premeditated.

Bristol City manager Alan Dicks saw four of his players booked and two penalties handed out to his team during Saturday's match at Crystal Palace. Dicks was convinced one of the penalties was a direct result of cheating.

"The referee should have booked Vince Hilaire for conning," he said. "Hilaire dived."

Tottenham manager Keith Burkinshaw, who saw his defender Paul Miller sent off, said after the match against Leeds: "There were a lot of con men out there today, and I felt sorry for the referee."

The managers realize it is up to them to put a stop to the growing violence and cheating.

At the moment a sending-off penalty merits a two- or three-game ban. In West Germany, a dismissal for violent conduct results in an eight-week suspension.

Chelsea gives post to Hurst

LONDON (AP) — Geoff Hurst was confirmed Tuesday as the new manager of Chelsea, the English League Second Division soccer club.

Hurst's appointment came six weeks after the resignation of Danny Blanchflower. Hurst, a former England World Cup star, has been the interim manager since Blanchflower's departure.

When he took over, Chelsea was struggling near the bottom of the standings, but five straight wins have lifted the club to fourth place.

As few bars as possible on route for Ranger fans

By Reuter

West German soccer club Hamburg SV has offered its players a bonus of $4,400 if it defeats Dynamo Tbilisi of the Soviet Union in the European Cup second round, that starts with the first leg in Hamburg tonight.

Hamburg, the West German champion, faces a team which caused a major upset in the previous round when Dynamo eliminated English champion Liverpool, winner of the European Cup in 1977 and 1978.

Hamburg's 2-1 victory over Valur Reykjavik of Iceland in the second leg of the first round gave the West Germans the round on aggregate 5-1. Hamburg will count on England star Kevin Keegan in its round against Tbilisi, which has a brilliant striker in Shengalia.

English First Division team Nottingham Forest, the defending European Cup champions, will be without two key players for a second-round, first-leg match at home against Romanian champion Arges Pitesti.

The casualties are Marian Radu, top scorer in the league last season, and midfielder Illian Barbulecu, who is suspended. Radu has a broken shoulder but should be fit for the second leg.

English First Division club Arsenal goes into today's European Cup Winners' Cup second round first leg at home to Magdeburg of East Germany.

Meanwhile, in Valencia, Spain, police plan a tight security operation today when about 1,500 Scottish fans arrive to see Glasgow Rangers play Valencia in the second round of the Cup Winners' Cup.

Valencia's assistant police chief said all roads to the stadium would be patrolled and fans would be searched for liquor before being allowed into the ground.

Buses carrying the Scottish fans will be parked in a segregated section near the stadium and the supporters will follow a route that will take them past as few bars as possible, he said.

The last European match the Rangers played in Spain was the 1972 final of the same tournament in Barcelona, when many of their 25,000 supporters rioted after the Glasgow team won the Cup.

Truscott evidence ignored?

TORONTO (CP) — A new book says the Ontario attorney-general's department might have ignored evidence 12 years ago that could have cleared Steven Truscott of the murder of Lynne Harper.

Who Killed Lynne Harper, by Bill Trent, says a convict stated in 1967 that he believed his brother had killed the girl.

Trent said "people with impeccable credentials" conducted an investigation then and the results were sent to the attorney-general's office but "nobody acted on it."

Truscott, 14 at the time 12-year-old Lynne was killed in 1959, was convicted and sentenced to be hanged for the slaying but the sentence was reduced to life imprisonment because he was a juvenile.

He was paroled 10 years ago and now is living somewhere in Ontario under another name. He has a wife and two children.

The book says Truscott was offered a deal by the federal government in 1966 to accept parole instead of a Supreme Court of Canada hearing to review his conviction. Truscott refused because he wanted an opportunity to clear himself.

In a 1975 interview he said he knew who the killer was.

Around the world in quest of the right mate

TORONTO (UPC) — When tales of the world's great quests are told, that of Raoul Angyal hardly ranks with Diogenes and Ulysses, but for persistence and gutsiness, his three-year search for a wife rates a mention.

The term "search" is ironic. Angyal, holder of a degree in modern history and a former high scool teacher, is blind.

Despite his handicap, the 52-year-old Italian has travelled thousands of miles through Africa, the Middle East and South America looking for a mate — motivated by loneliness and spurred by a bet with friends.

In the process, he has been deported from Cuba, ripped off by matrimonial agencies and discovered that in some parts of the world, charm is no substitute for a good cow.

Stocky, crag-faced, with graying hair neatly cropped to an old-fashioned crew-cut above dark glasses, Angyal sat in his dingy west end Toronto room recently and spoke of his travels.

He left his native Bologna three years ago, he said, determined to end his half-century of bachelorhood and find a wife.

The quest began after an afternoon of trading hard-luck stories with blind friends.

"They said, 'when you are blind, you can do nothing — no woman will marry you,' " Angyal recalled. He told them he could find a wife if he wanted to, and the bet was on.

"They said, 'if you come back with a wife, there will be many fine presents, but if you come back single as you were when you left, you must buy us vino every day for a month, as much as we want.' "

Angyal, a pensioner, left his room in the Via Montello boarding house operated by local priests and set off for Africa, where he travelled for 1½ years.

In some parts of Africa, he learned, a man must still offer a price for his intended wife — usually the traditional cow.

"Even if the woman's father is rich, he still wants a cow before you may marry his daughter."

He didn't find a wife in Africa, so he journeyed to the Middle East and then Latin America.

The list of countries he has visited is seemingly endless, and he readily hauls out his two visa-dotted passports as proof.

His only untoward experience, he said, was in Cuba, where he went after exploring the American southwest and Mexico. Two weeks after his arrival, and shortly before September's Non-Aligned Nations conference in Havana, Angyal was awakened at 3 a.m. by a knock on his door.

"They were very kind, the men from the immigration bureau, but they said they were following orders from the ministry of the interior, and told me to pack."

Angyal was not completely surprised by the government attention. He admits he had griped freely about conditions in the communist nation; the lack of commodities and poor transportation.

He was held for three days and questioned closely about his purpose for being in Cuba. "They said I was a CIA agent sent to disrupt the conference. They didn't like my attitude."

After the interrogation, the Cubans put Angyal on a Montreal-bound plane — an added indignity because Angyal hates to fly.

A bus trip to New York followed, after which Angyal travelled to Toronto, still single, and slightly less confident.

Although he's met "so many women, it's not just the man has to like the woman, she has to like the man, too," Angyal said, admitting he's running out of places to look.

He's tried matrimonial agencies, but "they just take your money, they're all crooks."

One thing complicating Angyal's search is his frankly old-fashioned attitude towards women.

"I am an old-style conservative," he mused. "A good wife must know when to shut up and when to talk and she must always be lower than her man.

"That doesn't mean she is inferior, but she must always make her man feel that he commands, even if she commands. A woman's job is to be the completion of her man."

Angyal realizes his attitude may doom him to permanent bachelorhood, but is willing to suffer loneliness rather than risk divorce, of which he strongly disapproves.

"If I find a good woman, a decent girl, I will marry her," he says. "If not, I stay alone, or it's like jumping from the frying pan into the fire.

"I'm afraid my friends are going to win the bet," he sighs. "But I'd rather buy them vino until they drink themselves into the hospital than marry a woman I don't like."

Cardinal gets Pearson prize

OTTAWA (CP) — Paul-Emile Cardinal Leger, who worked for 12 years as a missionary in Africa, became the first recipient of the Pearson Peace Medal at a ceremony at Government House today.

Gov.-Gen. Ed Schreyer presented the United Nations Association of Canada medal to Cardinal Leger, who resigned his archbishop's seat Montreal in 1967 to work with African lepers and handicapped children.

The Pearson medal is to be awarded to Canadians who contribute to causes for which former prime minister Lester Pearson stood: Aid to the developing world and those in need and peaceful change through world law and organization.

Cardinal Leger, 75, brother of former governor-general Jules Leger, returned to Canada in August.

Murder night moves traced

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — The movements of a man accused of second-degree murder in the death Feb. 23 of taxi driver Gregory Belliveau were traced in testimony at the opening of a trial before the British Columbia Supreme Court.

A former girlfriend, a bus driver and a taxi dispatcher testified at the trial of Jeffrey Robert Timms of Port Coquitlam.

Barbara Brenzy, the girlfriend, said Timms had visited her at her home in Vancouver on the evening of Feb. 23. He left in a good mood, she said, and bus driver Carl Morton said he picked up Timms.

Morton said he dropped Timms off at 1 a.m. The accused had told Morton he was heading for Patricia Ave. and Coast Meridian in Port Coquitlam and had indicated he had enough money to take a taxi.

Taxi dispatcher Lucille Raven then said she had received a call from a soft-spoken male requesting a cab at the corner where Morton had dropped Timms. Ms. Raven said she told the man, who said his destination was Patricia, that the taxi would take about three-quarters of an hour.

Belliveau radioed at 1:50 a.m. that he had picked up a passenger and was headed for Coast Meridian. It was the driver's last communication.

The murder victim was found by police slumped over the door of his car after a suspicious resident reported that taxi had been sitting with the motor running in a lane near Coast Meridian.

Belliveau died within minutes of his arrival at Royal Columbian Hospital in New Westminster.

A knife blade and broken pieces of knife handle were found in a yard close to where the taxi was parked. The silhouette of a man was seen at the rear of the car when the RCMP arrived.

The trial continues.

Tricks give way to trade

Premier Bill Bennett Tuesday took a second crack at telling reporters about his recent trade mission to the Far East and shrugged off questions about the so-called dirty tricks campaign.

Bennett, after saying he will make no further comment on the dirty tricks until the Social Credit convention next month or until "something substantial" comes out of the police investigation into the letters which were sent to newspapers under phoney names, launched into the details of what he calls a highly successful trade and political mission to the Far East.

The premier told a press conference that a decrease in the number of labor disputes has prompted high level business and government leaders in Japan and Korea to view Canada, and in particular B.C., as a reliable supplier and, as a result, they are interested in increasing their purchases of B.C. coal and forest products.

"That seemed to be the accent on the trip," he said. "Countries that have built up a manufacturing base must have not only price and quality, but security of supply, and B.C. and Canada are building a better record than some countries whose uncertain deliveries have made them unreliable."

Australia will be the province's major competitor on Japanese markets, the premier said, because in the early 1970s Australia moved agressively into Japanese markets to become Japan's major supplier.

Bennett is hoping that Japan will move to a 30-30-30 split in its trade activites, conducting 30 percent of its trade with Australia, 30 percent with Canada and 30 percent with other countries.

Forces cutting energy use

This is Energy Conservation Week for the department of national defence.

Capt. Colin Shaw, base commander of CFB Esquimalt, says the base is once again taking an active role in the national program.

"An intensive energy conservation program has been in operation at the base since 1974," he says.

"Some of the methods we use to accomplish program objectives are shutting off all lighting whenever possible, reducing light intensity levels in offices and reducing the consumption of heating fuels by motivating our people to shut off non-essential heat sources.

"We have also shut down heating plants in the summer months and replaced some standard full-size cars with compact vehicles to conserve gasoline."

Shaw says the results so far have been promising.

In the year 1978-1979 the base consumed approximately 45,800,000 kilowatt hours of power, a significant reduction from the previous year.

Shaw says predictions indicate the 1979-1980 year may be even better with a goal of a 24 per cent reduction.

Heating fuel consumption for the base is down 11 per cent from the previous year.

"The trend is indeed encouraging and evident that the base energy conservation program is achieving results," Shaw says. "I am confident that personnel of CFB Esquimalt will continue to do their share toward reducing consumption and contribute to even greater energy savings."

A woman who fought with the wife of a Baton Rouge restaurant owner over a menu substitution has sued for $20,220 in damages, citing injuries and loss of hair. The fight started when Evelyn Dutton dumped a dish upside down on the counter of Carlos' Mexican Food Inc. to show her dissatisfaction at the cost of the substitution. Mrs. Dutton said she started to walk out of the restaurant but Jean Urdiales attacked her from behind, grabbed her by the hair and threw her to the ground on the front sidewalk. The suit said the attack continued until Carlos Urdiales, the restaurant owner, pulled his wife off Mrs. Dutton. It said Mrs. Urdiales said she would have killed Mrs. Dutton if her husband had not intervened.

Reese

It took a lively octogenarian to warm the audience at a Toronto Symphony Orchestra concert. They sat stolid and grim until Jenny Bouck, 81, led the orchestra in a fiery rendition of Edward Elgar's Pomp and Circumstance. She's a life supporter of the symphony and has brought her baton to all performances "in case something happened to the conductor." She never got a chance to use it until she claimed her prize in the symphony's "dream auction."

Lee Majors was fast — even without bionic legs. He had a Porsche 907-10 to make his getaway from the Scarborough Civic Centre while filming a scene from The Last Chase, Martin Burke's movie about a gasoline-less society 25 years from now.

Four days after undergoing complicated brain surgery, singer Della Reese was reported in good condition at University Hospital in London, Ont. after a five-hour operation for a suspected aneurism. Miss Reese, 47, collapsed briefly Oct. 3 while taping a segment of the Tonight Show with guest host Richard Dawson in Hollywood.

- Kurt Miller was the 100 millionth person to walk through the gates of Walt Disney World in Florida — and he promptly burst into tears. Wailed the 8-year-old boy from Maryland, as fireworks, pigeons, balloons and band music filled the air, "Did I do something wrong?"

Former Yippie leader Jerry Rubin spoke at the University of Wyoming and his words led to a protest denouncing a fraternity's wet T-shirt contest as sexist and degrading to women.

Dear Abby:
After reading your column on gay spouses, I just had to write.

It is a shock and a heartache when a wife finds out that her husband has had an affair with another woman, but I cannot comprehend how any woman could accept a man as her competition. She would have to be crazy!

How can any normal woman let a man who has been with another man touch her? To me, it is unthinkable.

A Yiddish Mama

Dear Mama:
To you it is 'unthinkable.' But to those who have studied bisexuality and realize that one's sexual preference is rarely a matter of choice, it is understandable.

This is not an endorsement of infidelity of any kind, but rather an attempt to shed some light on one of the most misunderstood of all sexual behaviors.

Dear Abby:
My husband I recently joined a tennis club. On our first day at the club, I was terribly embarrassed when my husband, who was wearing dark-colored street clothes instead of the usual white shorts or pants and white shirt, was refused admittance on the courts!

Abby, can you (or anyone else) explain the reason for wearing white on tennis courts? And was my husband wrong to insist on playing in his street clothes?

Nameless

Dear Nameless:
On joining a club, members should be familiar with the club rules. If regulation tennis attire is required, then your husband was out of line. I have no idea why white is traditionally worn for tennis, but it certainly looks better. And it's cooler.

Dear Abby:
I have a very dear younger sister who frequently infuriates me by revealing my age! She does this subtly by telling her age, then adding that I am nine years older than she is.

I have asked her not to do this, but either she forgets or just doesn't respect my right to privacy. What can I do about it?

Fried Chicken

Dear Chicken:
Nothing, so don't get your tailfeathers up.

Dear Abby:
I have attended dinner parties and noticed that some people turn their wine glasses upside down to indicate that they do not wish to be served any wine. Is this considered proper etiquette?

Wondering

Dear Wondering:
No. A word to the waiter is sufficient.

Make gobblers out of goblins

It almost takes a witch's spell to settle the children down long enough to eat a Halloween supper when they'd rather be filling goodie bags and nibbling on sweets. But a wise parent plans a nutritious meal that's designed to attract her own goblins to the table before they go out to haunt the neighborhood.

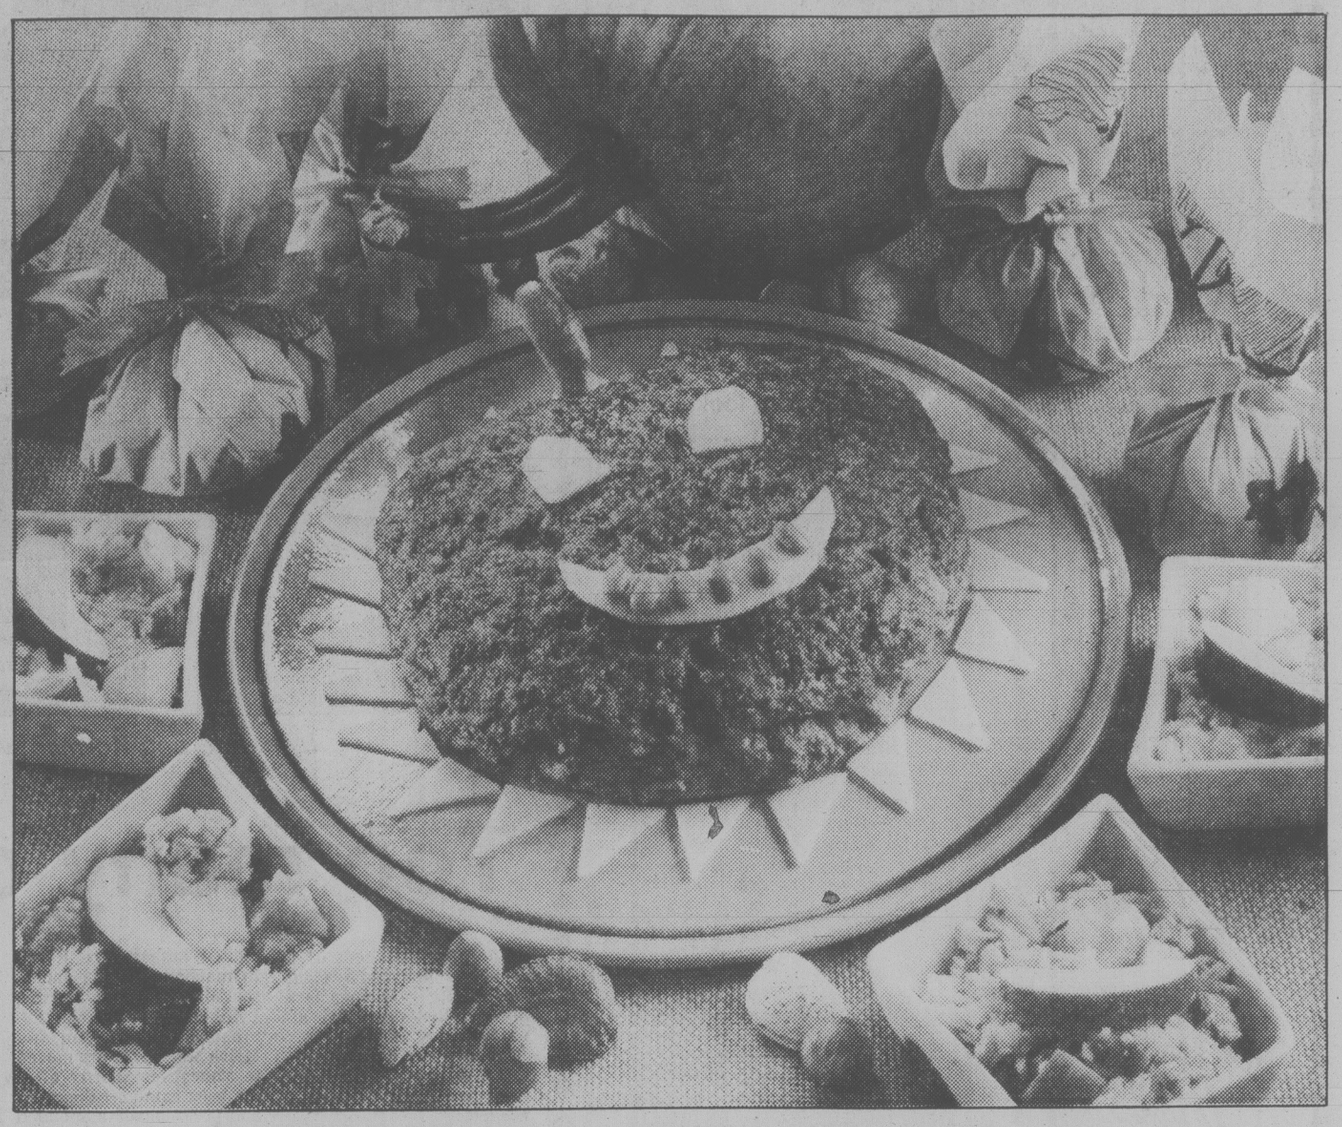
Masquerade Meatloaf, a nourishing main dish, is an ideal way to bewitch the kids at the supper table. Goblins will be especially surprised when they see that hidden inside is a flavorful baked bean mixture.

It's really no trick to prepare. A barbecue-flavored meatloaf mixture, seasoned with an envelope of sloppy joe seasoning mix, is formed into a shell or bowl shape. The beans are then spooned inside and topped with a meatloaf "lid".

You might want to try a trick or two of your own and ask the kids to decorate the meatloaf with pieces of cheese and green peppers.

Crispy Confetti Coleslaw is a nourishing salad to complement the meal. It combines those fall favorites, cabbage and apples.

Serve with crispy bread sticks and a glass of milk before sending your goblins on their way.



Masquerade meatloaf has a surprising, nutritious baked bean centre

MASQUERADE MEATLOAF

- 1 cup tomato juice
- 1 envelope meatloaf mix
- 1 egg
- ½ teaspoon salt
- 1½ pounds ground beef
- ½ cup fine dry bread crumbs
- 5 or 6 slices process cheese
- 1 can (14-oz.) baked beans
- ½ cup chopped celery

Stir together tomato juice and contents of meatloaf mix envelope. Combine half of this mixture with egg, salt, ground beef, and bread crumbs; mix lightly. Dice 4 slices of the cheese; combine with remaining tomato mixture, beans, and celery. In shallow pan, pat out half of the meat mixture to a 9-inch circle, building up edges to make a "shell". Spoon bean mixture into meat shell. Pat our remaining meat to a 9 or 10-inch circle; place over bean-filled shell and pinch edges to seal. Bake in 350 degree oven 40 to 45 minutes. cut jack-o'-lantern face from remaining cheese. Arrange on top of meatloaf. If desired, cut small triangles of additional cheese to garnish edge. 6 servings.

CONFETTI COLESLAW

- ¼ cup oil
- 1 tablespoon sugar
- 1 tablespoon prepared mustard
- 1 tablespoon vinegar
- ¼ teaspoon salt
- 6 cups chopped or shredded cabbage
- 2 unpeeled apples, diced
- 1 green pepper, if desired

Combine oil, sugar, mustard, vinegar, and salt; stir or shake until well blended. Place cabbage, apple, and green pepper in salad bowl; add dressing and toss lightly. 6 servings.

Safe Halloween wear easy and inexpensive

By JEANNE LESEM
UPI Family Editor

Khalil Manigault, 7, is going to make his own Halloween costume this year, with a little help from his mother, Jacqueline Davis-Manigault.

He'll probably be a big green monster patterned after The Hulk on television, Davis-Manigaulte said in an interview.

Khalil doesn't wait for the fall holiday to dress up in outlandish costumes, she added. He has been making them regularly since Halloween last year when he put together his first costume from scratch.

Ms. Davis-Manigaulte is extension associate in charge of Cornell University's 4-H home economics program in New York City. She has some great ideas for homemade costumes that are as safe and economical as they are fun to make and wear.

Ms. Davis-Manigaulte recommends sewing a cape to the shoulders of a child's outerwear or fastening it to the shoulders with safety pins because a tied-on cape could cause choking if it gets caught or pulled.

She also suggests Mommie's high-heeled shoes be worn only if they are pretty close to a child's own size — to avoid tripping or falls.

She said many children enjoy costumes more if they make them — with or without help from an adult.

Sewing skilll aren't necessary, she said.

"Once children become able to use an iron safely — that should be by about age nine — they can use iron-on appliques and fusible fibers instead of needle and thread. They can also draw designs with Magic Markers and safe fabric paints."

"Mom's and Dad's old T-shirts make good monster costumes, dyed a bilious green or tie-dyed," she added.

A brown paper bag makes a good mask if it is a comfortable fit, pretty close to the child's head size and not much below the chin area, she said. It should also have good size eye and nose cut-outs for good visibility and breathing space.

She recommends non-toxic glue, crushed eggshells and non-toxic paints for making a really creepy monster face on a paper bag — never plastic, because of the asphyxiation danger.

The least dangerous solution to the mask problem is washable, non-toxic makeup.

One new line of store-bought costumes this year comes with just that. The plastic capes with inflatable, ventilated head coverings are suitable for ages 3-adult. But the pullover cape would look skimpy on most older children, say from 11 or 12 years and up, and the neckline slash would have to be enlarged just to get it over the head.

Meanwhile in Los Angeles, Barbara Williams has found a use for pipe cleaners the manufacturers never dreamed of.

She recommends sticking them in a little girl's braids to provide that fright wig look for Halloween costuming.

She suggests using bent coat hangers for outlining wings, antennae and other shapes for homemade outfits.

As wardrobe manager of a family amusement park, Williams has many other ideas for economical and safe dressing up for next Wednesday's celebration:

—Look at thrift shops for accessories and old clothing that can be altered with only a little sewing — tuxedos that can be cut down to child size, old black skirts for witch costumes, old tablecloths for shawls and capes. They are sturdier than many store-bought costumes, she says.

—In altering adult clothing, remember dragging cuffs on trousers are easy to trip over and loose sleeves tend to snag and catch unless they are elasticized at the wrist or held in place with a larger rubber band.

—For space headgear, glue or sew painted paper cups or egg carton sections to skulls caps or visor hats.

—Put petroleum jelly (Vaseline) under makeup to make removal easy.

—Old pillow stuffing mixed with flour and water makes good beards and moustaches.

—Half-masks covering only the eyes are safer than full face masks.

Williams is responsible for the care and appearance of hundreds of costumes worn by employees of the Six Flags Magic Mountain amusement park in Valencia, Calif.

Measles threat soon to disappear

By DR. L.L. COLEMAN

Measles is fast becoming an eradicable disease. It won't be long before it joins the ranks of smallpox and polio as an almost extinct disease.

The real excitement of such a statement is particularly significant to those doctors who have seen the disastrous complications that can occur with some cases of measles.

The total elimination of measles must be a combined effort on the part of doctors, parents, educators and the children for whom they are responsible. The enormous drop of reported cases of measles in North America is directly related to strict adherence to the program of vaccination and maintained immunization.

The federal government has sponsored vaccination programs which make it possible for every child to be given this additional right to health.

The therapeutic use of steam has been a universal one for colds, grippe, bronchitis, laryngitis, flue and croup. For decades it was used because grandmother wisely insisted it was beneficial. Many grandmothers added a volatile oil in an effort to increase the efficacy of the steam. Benzoin, camomile tea, and eucalyptus were some of the favorities. Although they gave off a pleasant odor, they did not materially add to the medical advantages of the steam itself.

Now, a group of scientists feel that they have come up with the explanation as to why steam is so beneficial. Dr. Avraham Yerushalmi and Dr. Dov Ophir of the Weitzmann Institute in Israel, have developed a special instrument with two nozzles that vaporizes distilled water and gives off a steam of hot air directly into the patient's nostrils. Their theory is that viral infections of the nose and throat are benefited because the steam stops the multiplication of the virus.

This interesting scientific concept has been substantiated by the 1965 Nobel Prize winner, Dr. Andrew Lwoff, working at the Pasteur Institute in Paris. These doctors have found that the jet stream of hot air definitely decreases nasal secretion and almost immediately relieves severe headache and, in some instances, allergic reaction in the nose.

A great deal of attention will be paid to this concept. If the instrument eventually fulfills its promise, it will be a boon to blocked-nose sufferers.

Until the new instrument is available, remember that steam — from a kettle, a vaporizer or sauna — is soothing and beneficial for many problems of the upper respiratory tract.

And if you are a smoker, it wouldn't hurt to remove the compounding effect cigarettes have on sinus and breathing problemss — by quitting.

Too many cooks? No!

The sales success of a cookbook published by eight young Calgary women is a mystery, but sales have already topped $1.5 million.

"You have done everything wrong," Edmonton publisher Mel Hurtig told the women.

"But it's working. So keep on doing whatever it is you're doing."

The astonished but delighted authors are Karen Brimacombe, Linda Jacobson, Mary Korman, Marilyn Lyle, Helen Miles, Val Robinson, Joan Wilson and Moira Mackie. Moira moved to Vancouver shortly after the book came off the press and is no longer associated with The Best of Bridge Publishing Ltd., the company the women formed.

The women decided three years ago that it might be fun to compile a cookbook of recipes they served when they met regularly at each other's homes for bridge.

"The food is always the best part of bridge," they said.

Knowing nothing about printing, publishing, marketing, distribution or finance, they jumped in where large firms fear to tread and came up with The Best of Bridge.

The book is light-hearted, colorful and easy to read. In three weeks, the first printing of 6,000 was sold out. More than 200,000 copies have been sold and the book is in its 11th printing.

When sales hit the 100,000 mark, the women took their husbands out for a night on the town — limousines, dinner by candlelight and dancing. They shot the works.

Each member of the firm donates two days a week to the office, as well as handling telephone calls at their homes.

Their chores have doubled since the recent publication of the sequel to The Best of Bridge, titled Enjoy.

This week Korman and Lyle were in Victoria for appearances on CHEK-TV's noon show; Joe Easingwood's radio talk-back program on CJVI and a visit to The Times.

"People in Victoria are super — very personable and interested in our accomplishment," said Korman. "Maybe it's because this is not a hard-nosed urban centre. Even the taxicab drivers are nice — they want to know where you're going and why."

In the first month after publication, 20,000 copies of the first printing of 35,000 have been sold.

There is one big difference this time. The authors no longer have to trek from one bookstore to another trying to sell their product.

Since The Best of Bridge was born, the authors said life has been hectic. They've been on promotion trips across Canada, cooked up goodies in department stores, been interviewed and received bushels of fan mail.

"At first the department stores gave the book a rough time," said Lyle. "They'd say 'We'll take 24 books — that should be enough.' Then they were calling us for as many books as we could deliver before we were even out of town."

What's Next is an engagement calendar the women have done for The Bay chain and is available at its Victoria outlet for $5.95. It has all the photographs from Best of Bridge and some of the recipes.

"This whole thing has been a real hoot — and it still is," said Korman, who added that as a business their venture is growing more mature all the time.

"We had an accountant give us what for for not writing off certain things — now, after a hectic tour, I think we'll be able to write ourselves off," she said.

"It's made us businesswomen," said Lyle, whose brother Norm Hodgins handlettered the three publications to date. "There's not a dummy among us."

In fact, they've been too busy to play bridge, the game that started it all.

From the Canadian best-seller Enjoy, some samples:

CURRIED SCALLOPS

1 lb. scallops (fresh or frozen)
1/3 cup very fine bread crumbs
3 Tbsps. butter
1 tsp. curry powder
2 tsps. lemon juice

Butter a large baking dish and preheat oven to 450 degrees. Rinse scallops under cold water and dry well on paper towelling. Cut each scallop in half and roll in bread crumbs. Place one layer in baking dish and sprinkle lightly with salt. Melt butter in small saucepan, add curry and cook gently for 2 minutes. Stir in lemon juice and drizzle this mixture over scallops. Bake 15 to 20 minutes, until scallops are tender. Serve immediately with cocktail picks.

THE GAFFER'S SPAGHETTI SAUCE

1 lb. lean ground beef
1 onion finely chopped
1 10 oz. can button mushrooms, reserve liquid
Salt, pepper and garlic salt to taste
1 14 oz. can tomato sauce
1 28 oz. can tomatoes, cut up
3/4 cup chili sauce
1/4 to 1/2 tsp. each; oregano, marjoram, thyme (any or all as you wish)
1/4 cup dry red wine

Saute beef, onion, mushrooms, salt, pepper and garlic salt, crumbling meat as finely as possible until browned. If your meat isnot lean, be sure to drain any excess fat. Add mushroom liquid, tomato sauce, tomatoes, chili sauce, oregano, marjoram, thyme and salt to taste. If you don't have the chili sauce made up, substitute 1 Tbsp. brown sugar, 2 Tbsps. ketchup and 1 red chili pepper, crushed. Cook over low heat one hour until all ingredients get to know each other. Some water may be added asthis thickens. Don't be afraid to play with the spices a bit to suit your own taste. Add the red wine before serving. Serves 8.

MISSION CRY BABIES

1 cup shortening
1 cup sugar
2 eggs
1/2 cup molasses
1 Tbsp. vinegar
1 cup strong coffee
2 Tbsps. baking soda
2 cups raisins
4 cups flour
2 Tbsps. cinnamon
1 tsp. ginger
1/2 tsp. salt

Pour hot coffee over raisins, add soda and let stand. In large bowl measure shortening and sugar and beat until light. Add eggs and beat until light and pale. Beat in vinegar and molasses. Then add raising mixture. Sift flour, salt and spices and add to mixture. Drop by spoonfuls onto greased cookie sheet at least two inches apart. Bake at 375 degrees for 7 to 9 minutes. Do not overbake!

SWEET POTATO SUPREME

2 cups mashed, cooked sweet potatoes
2 Tbsps. cream or milk
2 Tbsps. melted butter
scant tsp. salt
1/4 tsp. paprika
1/2 cup brown sugar, packed
1/2 cup butter
1 cup (approximately) pecan halves, to cover casserole

Thoroughly mix potatoes, cream, melted butter, salt and paprika. Spread in greased casserole. Make the toppng by heating brown sugar and butter over low heat, stirring constantly, until butter is barely melted. (It is important not to cook after butter is melted, or the toping will harden when casserole is heated.) Spread topping over potatoes and cover with pecan halves. Refrigerate until ready to heat. This casserole may be warmed in an oven of any temperature or microwave, but should be bubbling hot before serving.

Use small apples and coat thinly when making Halloween confection

Trick or treat tradition in candycoated apples

Old-fashioned candied apples are always a fashionable treat for Hallowe'en. They are fun for the masked "trick or treater" and they're fun to make.

Choose small apples. They are easier to work with and easier to eat. Also keep the coating thin. That will make the treats more economical and easier for the little ghosts and goblins to manage.

If the gang from your house is planning to bring friends home after their outing stand by with a huge pitcher of Apple-Cranberry Punch and a heaping plateful of Chocolate Chip Cookies.

TOFFEE APPLES
Makes 8

8 small apples
8 wooden skewers or popsicle sticks
1 can sweetened condensed milk
1 cup sugar
¾ cup golden corn syrup
¼ cup butter or margarine
1 teaspoon vanilla

Insert wooden skewers well into stem end of apples. Combine sweetened condensed milk, sugar and corn syrup in a heavy saucepan. Stir and cook over medium heat until mixture reaches 230 degrees F on a candy thermometer or to the soft ball stage. Remove from heat. Stir in butter and vanilla. Dip apples into caramel mixture and spoon over to coat well. (Work quickly.) Place dipped apples stem side down on greassed waxed paper to firm and harden.

CARAMEL APPLES
Makes 6

60 caramels
2 tablespoons water
6 small McIntosh apples
6 wooden skewers or popsicle sticks
Popcorn, optional
Chopped nuts, optional

Combine caramels and water in heavy saucepan. Melt over low heat. Stir occasionally until sauce is smooth. Meanwhile, wash and dry apples. Insert sticks. Swirl in sauce to coat. Roll in popcorn or chopped nuts if desired. Place on a well-greased cookie sheet to set and firm. Keep cool until serving time. Wrap with plastic wrap or place in a small plastic bag for giving away at the door.

Microwave Method: Place caramels and water in a deep glass bowl or measuring cup. Microwave on highest setting, stirring occasionally, 2 minutes 45 seconds. Dip apples in sauce. If sauce thickens microwave 15 to 30 seconds to warm and soften it.

CHOCOLATE CHIP COOKIES
Makes 100 two-inch cookies

1¼ cup all-purpose flour
1 cup whole wheat flour
1 teaspoon baking soda
1 teaspoon salt
1 cup butter, softened
¾ cup granulated sugar
¾ cup firmly packed brown sugar
1 teaspoon vanilla
2 eggs
2 cup (12-ounces) semi-sweet chocolate chips
1 cup chopped nuts

Combine flours, baking soda and salt in a small bowl; set aside. Combine butter, sugar, brown sugar and vanilla in a large bowl; beat until creamy. Beat in eggs. Stir in flour gradually; mix and blend well. Stir in chocolate chips and nuts. Drop by rounded teaspoonfuls onto ungreased cookie sheets. Bake in 375 degrees F oven 8 to 10 minutes.

Those ghosts are for real

Beware the ghost who materializes from nowhere . . . the witch swooping down from the skies on a broomstick . . . and the monster emerging from the depths of a roadside puddle.

Goblins and other mythical creatures take to the streets a week tonight with one thing on their minds — and that one thing isn't always watching for cars.

The B.C. Automobile Association warns Victoria motorists to drive a little slower than usual on Halloween night, and with more care.

"No matter how often parents and teachers tell children to be alert when crossing roads, a child will often forget or ignore the advice and concentrate on more interesting things — candy and pals," says BCAA public relations spokesman Graham Edis.

The best advice for drivers to follow, he said in the association's Halloween statement, is the very same they may have given to their children:

—Make yourself visible. For drivers the club recommends driving with parking lights on during the afternoon and turning headlights on at dusk. Children should be dressed in light-colored costumes decorated with reflective tape. Retro-reflective materials are visible to drivers even at speeds of 70 and 80 mph, whereas the color white is safely visible only at speeds up to 50 mph. Flashlights should be carried.

—Don't rush out into the street without looking. Drivers should come to a complete stop at stop signs, and reduce speed and check every corner while driving on through streets. Children should pause and make sure all drivers are stopped at the intersection before crossing.

—Improve visibility. Foggy fall Victoria nights are upon us, and dirty windshields can impair visibility more than you think. Clean your windshields inside and out on Halloween day. Trick or treaters should wear makeup instead of maske. If veils, floppy hats and beards are important to a child's costume, make sure they are arranged so vision is not obstructed.

"Though adults may not view Halloween with any great enthusiasm, children do," said Edis. "They deserve to perform the rite of 'trick or treat' in safety.

Some tips on popcorn

When making popcorn, never put the salt in the popper with the corn because it tends to make the puffs tough.

Also, measure out one part of vegetable oil — never use butter because it will burn — to three parts of popping corn. The corn will pop up to about 30 times its unpopped volume.

the 60-minute gourmet

By PIERRE FRANEY

Scallops, because of their delicate, subtle nature, make a fine marriage with any number of other foods and seasonings. One of the most interesting combinations is scallops in a cream sauce with a touch of mustard.

Ideal dishes to accompany scallops in a mustard cream sauce are noodles enhanced with a few sliced mushrooms and a cucumber and dill salad.

SCALLOPS IN CREAM AND MUSTARD SAUCE

1 pound scallops, preferably bay scallops.

1 tablespoon butter.

1 tablespoon finely chopped shallots.

2 tablespoons red wine vinegar.

1 cup heavy cream.

Salt to taste.

1 tablespoon imported prepared mustard, such as Dijon or Dusseldorf.

1 tablespoon finely chopped parsley.

1. Heat the butter in a skillet and add the shallots. Cook briefly, stirring, and add the vinegar.

2. Add the cream and cook down over high heat until reduced by half. Add the scallops and salt to taste.

3. Cook, shaking the skillet so that the scallops cook evenly, about one minute. Remove from the heat and swirl in the mustard.

Yield: 4 servings.

NOODLES WITH MUSHROOMS

½ pound egg noodles.

2 tablespoons butter.

½ pound fresh mushrooms, thinly sliced, about 2½ cups.

1 tablespoon chopped parsley.

Salt and freshly ground pepper to taste.

1. Bring enough water for the noodles to the boil.

2. Heat the butter in a skillet and add the mushrooms. Cook until mushrooms give up their liquid. Continue cooking until the liquid evaporates.

3. Cook the noodles until tender and drain quickly. Return them to the hot kettle and add the mushrooms, the remaining tablespoon butter and parsley. Add salt and pepper to taste and toss.

Yield: 4 servings.

CUCUMBER SALAD

1 to 3 cucumbers, depending on size.

1 tablespoon sugar.

Salt to taste.

¼ cup white vinegar.

2 tablespoons chopped fresh dill.

Freshly ground pepper, preferably white pepper, to taste.

1. Peel the cucumbers and split them in half. Scoop out the seeds with a melon-ball cutter. If so-called "gourmet" cucumbers are used, it is not necessary to cut them in half or to remove the seeds.

2. Slice the cucumbers crosswise. There should be about four cups. Put the slices in a mixing bowl. Add the remaining ingredients and toss to blend. Add more seasonings such as vinegar, sugar and so on to taste, if desired.

Yield: 4 servings.

your partner's cookbook

By MIKE McGRADY

Today I'm going to ask you to commit one of the culinary world's classic no-nos. Maybe the classic no-no. One thing that no self-respecting cook would ever do — or, at least would ever admit to doing — is use ketchup as seasoning in a classy recipe.

The Staples: Make sure these are all on hand: butter, garlic, flour, salt, pepper, white wine, a small amount of brandy (preferably Cointreau or Grand Marnier) and, finally — remember, not a word about this to anyone — some ketchup.

The Shopping List: Two and a half pounds of boneless steak (either fillet mignon or round); three onions; one can beef bouillion; dill (fresh is best); one pint sour cream; one pound of flat noodles; one-half pound fresh mushrooms; two pounds of peas (fresh, is possible) and one quart of strawberries (ditto).

First, take a deep breath. Relax. While I'll concede that beef Stroganoff is somewhat more complicated than the dishes we've been cooking.

5:20 p.m.: The key to cooking any complicated dish getting some of the work out of the way before the fire is lit. Cut the beef into one-inch cubes. Chop the onions fine. Mince two cloves of garlic. Rinse the mushrooms, cut away the tips of the stems and slice. Shell the fresh peas and place them in a separate bowl. Rinse the strawberries and cut away the stems.

5:40 p.m.: Heat a large frying pan over a high heat. Add a quarter of a stick of butter and some of the meat chunks. Cook rapidly over high heat, stirring the meat so that it is browned on all sides, and after a minute or two, transfer the meat to another dish. Add more butter, more meat and repeat.

Put six quarts of water in your largest kettle and place this over high heat; this will be for the noodles. In a small saucepan, heat two or three cups of water; this will be for the peas.

6:00 p.m.: Back to the Stroganoff. Add a half-stick of butter to the frying pan and melt over medium heat. Put in the chopped onions and the minced garlic. Cook for a couple of minutes and then add the sliced mushrooms. Cook for an additional five minutes or so, stirring the mixture all the while.

At the beginning of this series, we promised to do away with exact measurements as much as possible. What you're going to do now is add some flour to the food in the pan. How much flour? Well, considerably more than a smidgen and somewhat less than a handful. Oh, the hell with it. Add three tablespoons of flour. Cook and stir a few seconds. Now take the frying pan away from the heat.

Now add a dash of the ketchup — or the sauce au tomate, whichever you prefer. A few shakes of salt, a few grinds of pepper — stir this together until the sauce has a reasonably smooth consistency.

When the water in the large pot is boiling, add the noodles slowly and follow the time directions printed on the package. When the water in the sauce pan boils, add the shelled peas and cook over medium heat for approximately 10 minutes before turning off the heat, draining and adding butter.

6:15 p.m.: Put the frying pan back over medium heat and slowly add one can of undiluted bouillon. (Caution! Very slowly.) Do this while stirring the mixture. Bring it all to a slow boil and then reduce the heat to low at once and allow it to simmer.

6:25 p.m.: Time for the final checklist. The peas should be ready to serve. The noodles should be drained and placed on a serving platter.

Add a healthy shot of white wine to your sauce. And the beef that was cooked earlier and reheat. Then, a few teaspoons of minced dill. And shortly before serving, the container of sour cream, stirring it into the sauce until it is well blended. (Danger! Do not allow sauce to boil after this point.

6:30 p.m.: Serve the Stroganoff over the noodles and scatter some fresh dill over the top. For dessert, you'll have the strawberries served with a touch of brandy. And now you can put the ketchup back.

questions & answers

Q. Some food experts recommend blending flour and butter in a saucepan and adding milk when preparing a white sauce. Others recommend bringing milk to the boil while adding a blend of butter and flour to the milk. To prevent the "floury" taste of a sauce, woul dn't it be better to start by cooking the butter and flour in the beginning?

A. I am of the school that starts by "cooking" the butter and flour together before adding the milk. It is largely a matter of custom, however. And to my mind more expedient. Given a blindfold test, I doubt if you could tell the difference between sauces made by both techniques.

Ideally, a sauce made by either method is theoretically better if it is simmered about 10 minutes after it is made. Very few cooks, even experts, take the time for this, however.

Q. You almost invariably specify making mayonnaise with a wire whisk. What's wrong with using an electric mixer? Also, can I make mayonnaise in a food processor?

A. There is nothing wrong with making mayonnaise using an electric mixer. In fact, it produces a mayonnaise equally as good as that made by hand. It only requires a few seconds and with the whisk there is no dismantling the beaters of the mixer and loosening the bowl. In other words, using a whisk saves time and steps.

There is also nothing wrong with making mayonnaise using a food processor. Unless you are careful, however, you may overbeat your egg yolks in the beginning causing them to overhomogenize. In which case, the mayonnaise will not thicken properly.

Q. A friend recently received a spice packet from Canada with one package labeled demerara. Neither of us had heard of this, and owners of several food specialty shops can offer us no information about it. Are you familiar with this item?

A. To the best of my knowledge, there is no spice called demerara. I suspect that the contents of that packet are sugar crystals. Demerara sugar is a soft sugar with fairly large, light amber crystals, the equivalent of light brown sugar. Demerara is the name of the principal river of Guyana and flows into the Atlantic. Presumably demerara sugar was first refined along the banks of that river.

A week to bake those tasty, untricky treats

hilda beastall

With Halloween one week away parents will be planning celebrating with at-home parties for youngsters as a safer way than having them on the streets after dark and perhaps in the rain.

A few games, some seasonal and inexpensive treats make a great party for all. Preparation of baking can be done during the coming week. It will be the clearing up after the party that is the biggest chore!

Apples are Halloween fare; washed, not too big, and of good sweet flavor, encourage their use as a raw fruit. Not only are all the needed minerals and vitamins intact when not peeled, but the chewing of a food as firm as an apple may be a new experience for many at your party. Too many f us today feed on soft starchy foods, highly sweetened or overspiced and salted. A good apple is likely to be really enjoyed. You may not realize this, but the act of chewing has been proven a part of the satisfaction of hunger in eating.

For something warm that will spell out a welcome at the front door, have ready an Apple Gingerbread with its light spicy aroma. Ginger as you may know, is a digestive spice not an excitant, and therefore likely to be less harmful for children, and the rest of us, than many more commonly used spices.

The Gingerbread can be made a day ahead and rewarmed for best flavor and that good smell.

This Apple Gingerbread needs serving with plates and forks, therefore have these arrangements planned. Drinks can be either milk or unsweetened orange juice, either of these go well with gingerbread.

APPLE GINGERBREAD

Apple Base:
- 3 cups (approx) thinly sliced apples
- 2 Tbsp brown sugar
- juice 1 small lemon or ½ large lemon

Gingerbread:
- 3 Tbsp soft margarine
- ¼ cup brown sugar
- 2 Tbsp blackstrap molasses
- 2 small or 1 large egg(s)
- 1 cup buttermilk (from powder)
- 1¾ cup wholewheat flour
- 2 Tbsp wheat germ
- ¼ tsp salt
- ¾ tsp baking soda
- 1 tsp baking powder
- ½ tsp powdered ginger
- ¼ tsp grated dry ginger root

First, grease baking dish 5X12X1½-inches. Pare and slice thinly the apples to make about one-half inch layer in dish. Sprinkle with lemon juice at once; then with sugar.

Bake uncovered in fairly hot oven 400 deg. F for 10 or 15 minutes until apples are almost tender. Do not scorch.

Meanwhile, cream margarine, sugar, molasses and eggs in large mixing bowl. Beat with large wooded spoon for one minute. Add buttermilk gradually, mixing well. I substitute one cup of plain homemade yogurt for buttermilk if plenty is on hand.

Measure all dry ingredients into sifter; mix, and sift gradualy into liquid mixture. Blend thoroughly with spoon.

The apples will now be ready to take from oven. Reduce oven heat to 350 deg. F.

Spoon Gingerbread batter over cooked apples spreading well to corners of dish.

Bake in oven, now at 350 deg. F for about 35 minutes or until top of Gingerbread springs back when pressed lightly with finger.

The easiest test for "doneness" in a cake is to thrust a clean dry knife blade into the thickest part of the cake or near the centre. If showing signs of batter on the blade, put back int oven at once, with a piece of foil paper loosely over top if necessary to prevent scorching while cooking for another three or five minutes.

A clean knife will come out clean when cake is cooked through.

Serve this Apple Gingerbread either hot or warm. A dribble of orange juice over the top will soak into the warm cake and add a pleasant flavor throughout. Reconstituted unsweetened frozen juice is good; or a fresh orange. (You could add a handful of raisins to the mix if there are any fanciers in your home.) The cake serves 8 to 12, according to size of pieces.

Now for a hot dessert for a cool day lunch when hungry youngsters come home at noon. Give them a cut-up salad first, of lettuce, tomatoes, cottage cheese and a grating of Cheddar cheese on top.

Then a hot Apple Pudding which is baked for about 50 minutes, so there is the time to make up the salad.

BAKED APPLE PUDDING
- ¾ cup wholewheat flour
- ¼ tsp salt
- ¼ cup wheat germ
- 2 small eggs OR 1 large egg
- 1 cup milk
- 3 medium apples
- 1 Tbsp brown sugar
- ¼ tsp or less, powdered ginger or a grating of ginger root
- ½ tsp baking powder
- 1 tsp brown sugar

NOTE: There is no fat in this recipe except in the whole milk, and very little sugar.

Mix flour, wheat germ, eggs and milk together in mixing bowl. Beat with large wooded spoon. Set aside while preparing apples.

Meanwhile, grease one-pint size casserole. Pare and quarter apples to almost fill. The chunks give a better flavor and texture for this particular pudding. Sprinkle with 1 Tbsp sugar and the ginger powder or ginger root.

Rebeat the batter; stir in the baking powder. Mix again. Pour batter over apples, coating all the top pieces with batter.

Bake in moderate over 350 deg. F for about one hour or until apples test done with a fork. Top should be slightly puffed and nicely brown. Sprinkle top with the 1 tsp brown sugar and serve hot.

This is a pleasantly thick pudding with the recognizable tang of the apples Serves 4 to 6 according to size of portions.

It is also a fine dessert to take on an outdoor picnic trip. Bake and wrap securely to retain heat.

Apple gingerbread is a spicy baked item — with raisins optional

Introducing
The Natural

Funny, it doesn't taste healthy.
In fact, sinfully rich is probably a better description.
The first time you let some melt in your mouth, you'll wonder how something that tastes that sweet and smooth could possibly be good for you.
But it is.
Because The Natural is made from carob instead of cocoa.
So it has all the tempting flavour you love from an ordinary chocolate bar. But fewer of the things you worry about.
Less sugar, fat or empty calories.
No additives or preservatives.
No habit forming stimulants.
Carob is rich in thiamin, niacin, Vitamin A, calcium, phosphorus, iron and other important minerals.
It's a good source of fibre.
It's a delicious, nutritious way to nibble on something that makes you feel sensible about snacking.
The Natural.
For chocaholics who want to kick the habit.
For sweet-tooths who'd rather put less sugar in their system.
For anyone who thinks that what they eat should be as good for the body as it is for the taste-buds.
The Natural. In two nutty new flavours—The Natural Carob/Peanut Butter and The Natural Carob/Almond.

Something to pear in mind . . .

By KAY SPICER

Pears are at the peak of perfection. Juicy and sweet with smooth-textured flesh, they are excellent fresh, out-of-hand and in salads or cooked in delectable desserts.

Two varieties are readily available in produce departments — Bartletts and Anjous. Pear lovers will want to try them both. They're in season.

Bartletts have a clear yellow skin with a faint blush. If they are still green when you buy them don't be alarmed. Simply hold at room temperature for a few days and they'll ripen perfectly without loss of quality.

Anjou Pears, globular shape with a distinctive, luscious flavor are the finest late-season pears grown on this continent. They never turn as yellow as other pears and are actually ready to eat as soon as the first yellow color appears on the skin. If not ready they will ripen perfectly if held at room temperature for a few days.

Pears also good fresh, or in a pudding

SPICY PEAR BARS
Makes 36 squares or 12 dessert bars

Crust:
1½ cups all-purpose flour
½ cup sugar
1 teaspoon baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
1 cup butter, melted
2 egg yolks

Topping:
½ cup sugar
¼ cup all-purpose flour
2 teaspoons cinnamon
½ teaspoon nutmeg
½ teaspoon salt
6 pears, peeled and sliced
2 egg whites, slightly beaten
Icing sugar

Combing flour, sugar, baking powder and salt. Beat butter and egg yolks together. Work into flour mixture. Press into 8-inch square baking dish. Mix together sugar, flour, cinnamon, nutmeg and salt. Toss pear slices with sugar mixture to coat slices. Arrange over crust. Brush pears with beaten egg white. Bake in 350°F oven 45 minutes or until pears are tender and crust golden brown. Sprinkle with icing sugar. Cut into squares or dessert bars.

PEAR SALAD
Makes 4 servings

3 cups peeled and chopped pears
1 cup chopped red apples
2 cups Mandarin orange sections
½ cup whole pecans
Lettuce leaves

Dressing:
½ cup salad dressing or mayonnaise
¼ cup frozen concentrated orange juice, thawed
½ cup whipping cream, whipped

Mix fruits and nuts. Blend mayonnaise and orange juice; fold in whipped cream. Pour generously over mixed fruit and nuts. Serve on lettuce leaves.

MINTY PEAR SPLITS
Makes 6 servings

1 L lime sherbet
¼ cup creme de menthe
6 fresh pears

Spoon sherbet into large chilled bowl. Beat until smooth, but not melted. Stir in creme de menthe; freeze. Peel and slice pears. Arrange pears in attractive glass bowls. Spoon sherbet over pears. Garnish with a sprig of mint and serve with chocolate fingers.

The no-salt people share their flavor secrets

craig claiborne

In their enthusiasms, people who cook without salt are like golfers. Or tennis players. Or skiers. But rather than discuss their latest exploits in sinking a putt or the newest racquets, or the snows of yesteryear and tomorrow, the salt-free people talk about the secrets they use to give special "force" or "emphasis" in flavor to foods.

When I recently wrote about my introduction to no-salt cookery, I received scores of letters from readers, most welcoming me to "the club." Then one evening not long ago I was sitting in a restaurant in the Hamptons when a customer turned to me and said, "You're on a salt-free diet. You should meet my mother-in- law. She used to be a caterer and she is the best salt-free cook in the world."

High praise, indeed. Shortly thereafter, I telephoned her mother-in-law, a congenial, animated, robust-looking woman named Belle Ephraim. When I arrived at her apartment late one morning, she was in the midst of preparing several salt-free dishes.

Some of her favorite flavor boosters are fresh herbs, including basil, dill and thyme. She uses a lot of garlic, particularly in stews. "A good many savory foods can be improved with dried oregano and rosemary," she said. As she added a touch of sugar to the beef stew, she went on: "And I'll tell you a secret — a tiny pinch of sugar can do wonders in bringing out the flavor of a dish, sometimes when you least expect it." Thinking about it, she added a scant spoonful of sugar to the baked fish sauce.

"Port wine," she noted, "has a decided sweetness about it, and it is excellent with chicken."

Just before the chicken dish was done, she added what the salt-free cult calls a "no-no." This was shrimp.

"It doesn't hurt to cheat a little on my diet," she said. "Of course, you don't have to add the shrimp. The dish is fine without it, but the shellfish offers an interesting contrast to the chicken.

"I'll give you another tip," she continued. "Lemon juice does wonders for thousands of salt-free dishes. But have you tried vinegar? It gives a curious and welcome 'crispness' to foods that aren't delicate, foods like beef." She had added vinegar, too, to the beef stew.

As we dined, I remarked that the food from her kitchen was in all aspects admirable.

BAKED FISH

1½ to 2 pounds skinless, boneless fillets of fish such as gray sole, lemon sole or flounder
juice of one lemon
¾ teaspoon dried thyme
Freshly ground pepper to taste
1 tablespoon plus 4 teaspoons unsalted butter
1 tablespoon sunflower, peanut, vegetable or corn oil
2 large onions, peeled and thinly sliced, about 2 cups
1 teaspoon coarsely chopped garlic
1 large sweet green pepper, cored, seeded and cut into thin strips, about 2 cups
3 cups red ripe tomatoes cut into one-inch cubes
2 tablespoons finely chopped fresh basil or 4 teaspoons dried
1 tablespoon finely chopped parsley
¾ teaspoon dried oregano
¾ teaspoon sugar
¼ teaspoon dried crushed rosemary
1½ teaspoons finely minced garlic.

1. Lay fish out on a flat surface. Sprinkle on all sides with lemon juice, one-half teaspoon thyme and pepper. Refrigerate.

2. Heat one tablespoon butter and the oil in a large skillet and add the onions. Cook about 10 minutes, separating into rings as onions take on a golden brown color.

3. Add coarsely chopped garlic and green pepper. Continue cooking, stirring, until pepper strips are slightly limp. Add tomatoes, one tablespoon chopped fresh basil or 2 teaspoons dried, parsley, remaining thyme, one-quarter teaspoon oregano, a generous grinding of black pepper and the sugar.

4. Cook, stirring to blend the ingredients well, about five minutes. Cover and cook 30 minutes. Cool briefly.

5. Preheat oven to 350 degrees.

6. Remove the fish from the refrigerator. Spoon about one tablespoon of the vegetables in the sauce into the center of each fillet. Roll the fillets.

7. Spoon the remaining sauce into a baking dish. Arrange the fish rolls on top and sprinkle them with equal amounts of rosemary, finely minced garlic, and remaining oregano. Dot the tops with remaining butter.

8. Place the fish rolls in the oven. Bake about 20 to 25 minutes, basting occasionally.

Yield: 4 servings.

CHICKEN AND PORT RAGOUT

1 chicken, 3 pounds, cut into serving pieces
Freshly ground pepper to taste
2 tablespoons sunflower oil
¾ cup finely chopped onion
1 tablepoon chopped garlic
2 tablepoons finely chopped parsley
1 tablespoon coarsely chopped fresh basil or 1 teaspoon dried
1 cup fresh or canned unsalted tomato sauce (see note)
One-third cup plus ¼ cup port wine
⅛ teaspoon or more hot dried red pepper flakes, or more to taste.

1. Sprinkle the chicken with pepper.

2. Heat the oil in a skillet large enough to hold chicken in one layer. Add chicken, skin side down, and brown on one side. Turn the pieces and brown on other side. The time for browning is about 15 minutes.

3. Add the onion, garlic, parsley, basil, tomato sauce and one-third cup port wine. Cover and cook 25 to 30 minutes. Add the remaining port wine. Sprinkle with hot red pepper flakes and stir to blend. Serve.

Yield: 4 servings.

RAGOUT WITH SHRIMP

Just before serving the chicken and port wine dish (see recipe above), push the chicken aside and add 12 medium-size peeled, deveined shrimp to the sauce. Stir and cook about three or four minutes, turning shrimp until they lose their raw look. Stir to blend chicken and shrimp uniformly.

BEEF STEW

2 pounds lean chuck or bottom round
2 tablespoons flour
Freshly ground pepper to taste
1 tablespoon safflower oil
3 tablespoons unsalted tomato paste
1 cup finely chopped onion
1 to 2 cups rich, unsalted beef broth
1 bay leaf
¼ teaspoon cinnamon
¼ teaspoon ground allspice
2 teaspoons chopped fresh basil or ½ teaspoon dried
½ teaspoon sugar
½ cup dry red burgundy wine
4 carrots, trimmed and scraped and cut into one-inch lengths, about 1½ cups
12 small white onions, peeled and left whole, about 1¼ cups
12 small whole mushroom caps, about 1 cup, or use 1 cup of halved or quartered large mushroom caps
1½ teaspoons white vinegar
1 cup fresh or frozen shelled green peas.

1. Preheat the oven to 350 degrees.

2. Cut the meat into 1½-inch cubes. Sprinkle with flour and black pepper.

3. Heat the oil in a skillet and add half the cubes of meat. Brown on all sides, about five minutes. Transfer the cubes to a casserole as they brown. Brown and transfer remaining cubes.

4. Add the tomato paste, chopped onion, one cup beef broth, bay leaf, cinnamon, allspice, basil and sugar. Add pepper to taste. Cover. Bring to the boil on top of the stove. Place in the oven and bake 30 minutes. Add the wine and continue cooking about 10 minutes. As the beef cooks, add more beef broth if necessary.

5. Add the carrots and white onions. Cover and continue baking about 10 minutes or until carrots are barely tender.

6. Add mushrooms and continue baking about 30 minutes. Sprinkle with vinegar.

7. Add the peas and cook five minutes longer. Serve with cooked noodles.

Yield: 4 to 6 servings.

The bidding:

West	North	East	South
1 ♡	Dble	3 ♡	Pass
Pass	Dble	Pass	3 ♠
Pass	4 ♠

Opening lead — king of hearts.

One of the great advantages of duplicate bridge is that it exposes errors that ordinarily would not be noticed in the average "pick-'em-up-and-lay-'em-down" rubber bridge game.

For example, take this deal where South, playing rubber bridge, got to four spades and West led the K-A of hearts. Declarer ruffed and played a trump to the queen, which lost to East's king. South later lost a club trick to the ace, making four spades, and the players then went on to the next deal.

Now let's assume that the same deal occurred in a team of four match and the bidding and play at the first table went exactly as described above. North-South would score 120 points for four spades and also 300 points for bidding and making a non-vulnerable game.

The hand would then be passed to the second table and the opposing team's North-South pair would probably get to four spades also. Again West would lead the king of hearts, but let's say that this West, a shrewder defender than his counterpart at the first table, shifted to the ace and another club!

As a result, South would go down one. Whenever East got on lead with his king of trumps, he would return a club for West to ruff. So the East-West pair at the second table would go plus 50 points, instead of minus 420 points, and their team would win 470 points on the deal.

The West player at the first table would soon learn that he had goofed by leading the ace of hearts at trick two. He would belatedly realize that his partner practically had to have the king of spades for his three heart bid. West's ego might suffer from the painful experience, but he would probably be grateful that duplicate bridge had dramatically pointed out a weakness in his game.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

Astrological Forecast for Thursday, October 25
By SYDNEY OMARR

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You make valuable contact with one who aids in bridging distance, language and cultural barriers. Accent on travel, special communications and advance royalties for long-range project. Cancer, Sagittarius, Capricorn natives figure prominently.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Emotions tend to obscure logic; mystery, money and love are involved. You prove a major point — what seemed far away is actually close at hand. Be aware of legal ramifications, special papers, rights and permissions. A debt is repaid.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You obtain proverbial second chance. Emphasis on contract, co-operative effort, publicity, partnership and marriage. Leo, Aquarius natives figure in unusual scenario. Time is on your side. Refuse to be rushed into premature commitment.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Go slow, review facts at hand. You learn by teaching — one who aided you in past makes re-appearance. Another Cancer, a Leo and an Aquarian figure prominently. Employment, health and restless relatives dominate scenario.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Opportunities for social advancement multiply; you make contacts which enhance lifestyle. Accent on change, travel, variety, intensified relationship. Element of luck rides with you — the number 3 figures prominently.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Stress quality material, security, improve safety conditions at home base. Be thorough, stick to factual data. You gain support from one who has experience and financial backing. Some delays, restrictions actually work in your favor.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Read, write, express views, diversify, make inquiries and be aware of potential. Unusual call or messgge might result in short journey. Gemini, Sagittarius and another Libran figure in scenario. You will locate lost article.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Emphasis on protecting valuables, adding to possessions, making domestic adjustment. You get what you need through diplomacy, not force. Know it and act accordingly. Taurus, Libra and another Scorpio figure prominently. You could win a contest.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You make contact which might result in financial gain. Trust judgment, intuition. What had been a secret will be revealed — you'll be beneficiary. Define terms see situations, people as they actually exist. Avoid self-deception.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Clandestine arrangement results in added responsibility, emotional commitment and chance to elevate financial status. Another Capricorn and a Cancer native play key roles. Be discreet, don't bore others by telling all you know.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): One who made promise in past is sincere and will prove it. Accent on friends, hopes, wishes, increased popularity. You will be rid of unnecessary burden. One you respect confides dilemma. Don't cast first stone.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): New start, independent action enhances standing in community. Superior makes room for you at top. Accept added responsibility, apply your own creative touch. Leo, Sagittarius natives figure prominently. Avoid lifting heavy objects.

IF OCTOBER 25 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY . . . you are not easy to know, an aura of mystery draws people to you. You tend to brood, worry and to strive for perfection. Many of your idols seem to have feet of clay. Your standards are high, individual and at times seem impossible to attain. You work best behind the scenes, could succeed in film, television, hospital administration, private investigation. Pisces, Virgo persons play important roles in your life.

FUN WITH FIGURES

By J. A. H. HUNTER

"Look at this bill from Dellers," said Susan. "The first figure of the cents is smudged and I can't make out what it is."

Harry looked. "Twenty two dollars and blob one cents." he read aloud. "There's no unit price shown, but they must be all the same. They were 29 Kalotan kempels."

What was the total amount?

Foothills pipeline supporters missing point?

By GARRY FAIRBAIRN

OTTAWA (CP) — While Liberals and Conservatives batter each other in the Commons over who has given most support to the proposed Foothills oil pipeline, both sides may be missing the point.

The point, officials close to Canada-U.S. energy dealings say, is that the Foothills plan to build a pipeline overland from Alaska and avoid the use of tankers never had a chance of approval by U.S. authorities.

By trying to push that dead horse across the border, they argue, both the former Liberal government and the current Conservative one may have lost a chance to exert substantial influence on the type of oil-tanker transportation system being planned for Alaskan oil.

Prime Minister Clark will have an opportunity to try to make up for any lost time early next month, when President Carter visits Ottawa. Energy and environmental issues are high on their agenda.

But the complicated controversy is moving steadily closer to resolution. Carter is scheduled to announce his decision on a transportation system for Alaskan oil in early December.

The basic problem is how to get oil from Alaska's Prudhoe Bay into the U.S. Midwest, which relied upon Canadian oil until Canada started reducing oil exports.

The two-year-old Trans-Alaska Pipeline System is smoothly moving oil from the northern Alaska offshore oilfields to the south Alaska port of Valdez, whence tankers relay the oil to California and Texas.

Four basic proposals have been made for more direct, less costly routes to the U.S. Midwest:

— The planned $1.6 billion U.S. Northern Tier pipeline would receive the oil in Washington state and move it east over a new 2,300-kilometre pipeline at the rate of 709,000 barrels a day.

— Trans Mountain Pipe Line Co. proposes a $520 million, 840-kilometre line carrying 500,000 barrels a day from Washington state to the existing pipeline system in Alberta, then south to the U.S. Midwest.

— Foothills Oil Pipe Line Ltd. has proposed $1.8 billion, 2,420-kilometre pipeline that would carry 500,000 barrels daily entirely overland, avoiding any use of tankers.

— The Kitimat Pipe Line project offered a 1,250-kilometre, $750 million line to Alberta from a proposed oil port at Kitimat.

Unilateral Ottawa rejection of an oil port at Kitimat in northern British Columbia quickly eliminated that plan, which would have had the benefit of sending oil tankers elsewhere than the narrow navigable channel of the Strait of Juan de Fuca. But it would have created environmental hazards in the constricted Kitimat bay and northern B.C. islands.

As its predecessor did, the new Conservative government urged the United States to approve Foothills and eliminate additional environmental hazards to the west coast from oil tankers.

When U.S. Interior Secretary Cecil Andrus recently recommended the Northern Tier project to Carter, listing Trans Mountain as an acceptable alternative if Northern Tier has problems getting financing, opposition Liberals accused the Conservatives of failing to promote Foothills energetically enough.

But officials say the key point is that the bulk of the U.S. bureaucracy is leaning toward Trans Mountain, and that project still has a chance.

Although the Trans Mountain plan lacks the psychological appeal of being an "all-American" route — a significant factor in the wake of Canada's latest reduction in oil exports — the officials say it would cost 25 per cent less for transportation than Northern Tier.

The lower transportation cost could well induce financial institutions to swing their influence behind Trans Mountain, letting better pipeline economics take precedence over the question of which country gets the economic benefit of construction.

In that sense, the officials said, Andrus is recommending that Trans Mountain and Northern Tier fight it out in the financial marketplace, a recommendation that Carter is expected to endorse.

Two other aspects of Andrus's decision that were given little publicity would reduce environmental dangers in any tanker system, they say.

His recommendation for mandatory refinery hookups would mean that all four refineries on Washington's Puget Sound would take their oil by pipeline from the same unloading point, thus eliminating the need for tankers to continue entering Puget Sound as they now do.

And Andrus's stipulation that the proposed unloading point be moved substantially west of Port Angeles, Wash., meant that tankers would spend less time in the Strait of Juan de Fuca.

By pushing for enactment of those specific recommendations, the officials say, Ottawa could help lessen environmental dangers from tanker traffic. It could also promote the Trans Mountain plan and win economic benefits for Canada if successful.

But there is virtually no prospect of U.S. authorities being persuaded to reverse bureaucratic momentum and go for Foothills, they say.

Momentum aside, the Foothills plan is seen as potentially harmful to the economics of the existing Alaska pipeline that moves oil to the port of Valdez.

The U.S. energy department, among other U.S. agencies, formally advised Andrus and Carter that even without the economic impact on the existing Alaskan line, Foothills is too costly:

"The Foothills proposal does not appear competitive because of its high capital and operating costs and would not be attractive to the U.S. even if Canada granted necessary approvals in the near future."

Close shave at oil plant

FORT MCMURRAY (CP) — Syncrude Canada Ltd. has had far fewer problems than anticipated after adopting a no-beard policy at its oil sands plant in northeastern Alberta, Bud Theriault, a senior safety co-ordinator for the company, says.

There was some initial employee concern, Theriault said in an interview, but there has generally been good co-operation since the company began enforcing its clean-shaven policy Oct. 1.

The rule applies to anyone working in the hydrocarbon area of the plant, which includes virtually the entire site with the exception of the administration building and mine.

The no-beard rule is a safety precaution. It is difficult to get a proper seal on a gas mask if the wearer has a beard. The policy also requires that moustaches be no longer than the edger of the upper lip.

Theriault said the new rule concerned some employees, particularly long-time beard wearers. In one case a woman who had been married 11 years had never seen her husband without a beard.

The safety co-ordinator said an Edmonton lawyer contacted the company about the policy and there was some suggestion of a class action but no action has been taken.

The new policy affects about half of the total plant population. Syncrude has 3,000 permanent employees, including staff in Edmonton, and there are about 1,200 men working with contractors on the site.

Theriault said negative reaction to the policy was limited because extraction workers were already under a no-beard policy. The same was true of the plant's largest contractor, Catalytic Enterprises Ltd.

The policy applies to everyone who visits the restricted areas of the plant, including project participant-owners, government officials, inspectors, small contractors and reporters.

Earlier this month David Suzuki, bearded host of the CBC television program The Nature of Things, waited outside the no-beard areas while his crew did some filming.

Jobless down

LUXEMBOURG (Reuter) — The number of unemployed people in the European Common Market fell by 0.1 per cent last month to 5.9 million, or 5.4 per cent of the working population, according to statistics issued here. Compared with Sept. 1978, unemployment eased by 2.4 per cent, with most countries showing considerable reductions. But unemployment in France rose 10.8 per cent.

Cartoonist buries the hatchet-face

CALGARY (CP) — Everett Soop's major beef is people who believe that Indians have no sense of humor.

"We're stereotyped as very stoic people with stone faces, like in the old movies where people are always striking their matches on cigar-store Indians," he says.

Soop, 39, has been titillating readers of the Kainia News, a Blood reserve-based newspaper serving five tribes of southern Alberta, for 11 years with his cartoons and, more recently, a barb-witted column.

Soop interprets the world with satirical ink. And, despite a tendency to bluff people into thinking he's a "miserable, ornery cuss," his trademark is compassion, like that of most other satirists.

Without rancor, Soop takes aim at the insensitivity of white society toward the country's original inhabitants and what he feels is the pettiness of the federal Indian affairs department.

But Soop isn't color blind when it comes to his sense of justice. Many of his cartoons and columns take pot shots at his own people — particularly dictatorial tribal councils and overblown Indian politicians.

Glenbow historian Hugh Dempsey, in the introduction to Soop's recently-published collection of cartoons, called him "the social conscience of the Blood tribe."

"Indians are such natural cartoon subjects — they're always losing," he says with a characteristic half-smile.

Soop credits his grandmother, Louise Healy, who died several years ago at age 94, with teaching him "to be proud of being an Indian by being able to laugh at myself."

Soop's refusal to let his people take themselves too seriously has not always made him popular on reserves.

"When I started, I did run into trouble. They kept telling me it's all right to make fun of the white man but 'why do you make fun of the Indian?'

"I tell them if you don't share your humor with the white men, they're going to laugh at you rather than with you."

Soop's good-natured humor is all the more impressive considering the fact that he suffers from muscular dystrophy, a progressive muscle-wasting disease. His torso is twisted to one side and his stomach is distended.

He walks with great difficulty, using a cane, and must be helped in and out of a car.

"My arms and legs are still strong but my back and legs are giving up fast. The thing I have to watch out for is pneumonia. Oh, I don't think I'm going to last that long.

"In a way it's kind of good. It makes me want to at least achieve something. I think if I was basically fit now, I'd probably be playing pool or something."

Soop was born to a large family — five boys and a girl — on the Blood reserve near Cardston, Alta. The translator who gave the family its English name mistakenly used the childhood Blackfoot name of Everett's grandfather, which was Soup, arising from the fact that he had been raised on beef broth. The name was further anglicized to Soop by Anglican clergy.

Everett attended St. Paul's Anglican residential school for six years. His brother Louis recalls that even then he was well-known as a prankster. On one occasion he raided the larder and sold the contents to the other students.

When Everett was 13, the wasting of his muscles became a problem, restricting his ability to box and play hockey.

"I had a mean streak," he says. "When I couldn't hit them any more physically, I started hitting them mentally."

Ballooning interest inflates fears

Soaring interest rates hit farmers every bit as hard as they do other major industries but the effects are harder to pin down.

What is known is that for every percentage point increase, the monthly interest bill paid by food producers across Canada jumps by about $5 million.

While homestead buffs may see the art of farming as an occupation involving little more credit than a grubstake for a supply of beans, such is not the case.

In March, 1978, Canadian farmers were indebted to the chartered banks to the tune of $3.5 billion and were collectively paying interest charges of about $32 million a month.

Today, with the rise in interest rates induced by the Bank of Canada, farmers owe the chartered banks about $5.5 billion and face a monthly interest bill of about $68 million — more than double last year's figure.

These costs come directy out of farmers' pockets, squeezing cash flow and making interest rates a serious management concern for the first time in history.

For example, the most recent increases will bring many farmers face to face with the interest bill on loans to grain dealers, estimated at $16 million each month.

Grain farmers are also finding that the carrying charges assessed on grain once it is in the hands of grain dealers are increasing sharply and are becoming a significant factor in the price received.

For example, the most recent increase in interest rates to 13.75 per cent will cost flax and rapeseed growers more than a dollar a metric ton in increased carrying charges.

Tom Ellison, who farms near Selkirk, Man., is concerned about skyrocketing interest rates, especially for young grain farmers just getting started.

He said it isn't unusual for these farmers to run an operation with half a million dollars in borrowings — a debt load that now carries interest charges of about $7,000 a month.

These farmers — and many others — "must market their grain at the earliest possible moment," he said.

Not only do they need cash flow to pay fertilizer bills of $9,000 and land taxes of $3,000, the grain in the bin doesn't pay interest.

Unless grain prices rise rapidly in the months ahead — an unlikely prospect in any given year — farmers are further ahead selling at a lower price and putting the money into 90- or 180-day guaranteed investment certificates.

This means finding immediate markets which, in turn, means growing crops that are outside the Canadian Wheat Board's quota system. Unless interest rates relent, there could be an even stronger push towards oilseed crops, sunflowers, and specialty crops such as peas, beans and lentils in western Canada next spring.

Being businessmen, beef producers also feel the crunch of high-cost money. Ed Thiessen, who feeds cattle near Blackie, Alta., says interest rates have now become the biggest expense next to feed costs.

If you finance your inventory, he says, you have to look at opportunity cost, and if you can't make 12 per cent it's not worth feeding cattle.

According to Thiessen's costs, the profit on feeding cattle is now about $22 per head without interest charges. When interest is taken into account each steer costs about another $2.25.

Inflation may be putting the squeeze on Canada's farmers, but deflation would hurt even more.

Gordon MacEachern of the Agricultural Economics Research Institute of Canada points out that farmers are now attuned to inflation and use it as part of their decision-making.

"What we see happening, despite high interest rates and high inflation, is substantial investment still going on. But it is investment in future inflation — and that could be scary."

If land prices were suddenly to deflate, what would happen to the young farmer who paid $600 an acre for land, fully expecting it to be worth $900 a few years from now?

As MacEachern said, "The whole world economy is now shaky and any number of things can upset the applecart."

No wonder researchers have found farming to be one of Canada's highest stress occupations — far from the dream farms conjured up in the comfortable confines of an urban apartment.

Albertans guzzle more than gas

CALGARY (CP) — Some dairy products are in danger of disappearing from the shelves of Alberta stores because of residents of the province fondness for drinking milk, said Fred Hutchings of the provincial agriculture department. There is a danger that evaporated milk, powdered milk and cottage cheese could disappear from the stores.

Rat infestation

SASKATOON (CP) — The city exterminator has been called to investigate an apparent rat infestation in a residential area in Saskatoon's west end. Joanne Anderson, a resident of the area, said she spotted 15 of the rodents, which she described as black and about 10 inches long. Some of the rats chased children in the area.

Discrimation?

EDMONTON (CP) — Leroy Thompson is charging discrimination after he was refused service by two Yellow Cab drivers at Edmonton Municipal Airport. Thompson, a Calgary resident who is confined to a wheelchair, has sent written complaints to the Alberta Human Rights Commission, the City of Edmonton bylaw enforcement department and Yellow Cab Ltd.

Lifer appeals

CALGARY (CP) — Roy Mund has filed an appeal against his conviction and life sentence last June for kidnapping and castrating a city teacher. The former Calgary Remand Centre guard was sentenced to life imprisonment for kidnapping and 14 years for wounding, the maximum penalties under the Criminal Code. Mund's lawyers will argue that the sentence was excessive considering Mund's age and background — his only previous conviction was for possession of a restricted weapon.

Housing costs up

RED DEER (CP) — The average house sold in Red Deer in the first nine months of this year cost $69,135. The figure is about $6,000 higher than the average for the same period in 1978.

Plant shutdown

WINNIPEG (CP) — Sherwin-Williams of Canada Ltd., a Montreal-based paint manufacturing company, will close its 74-year-old Winnipeg plant Nov. 30. The 32 non-union employees will receive one week's pay for each year of service as well as their pension benefits. Pearl said the company has lost $8 million in the past three years.

Better relations

CALGARY (CP) — City police have sent a constable to Hong Kong for a year in an attempt to improve relations with Calgary's Chinese community. "It's a $20,000 investment designed to improve a relationship which was a concern to us," said Deputy Chief Ernie Reimer. The money will support Constable Randy Perrett, 27, his wife and two children while he studies Chinese languages, culture and history and takes detective courses from the Hong Kong police.

3 Indian women charged

MONTREAL (CP) — Three Mohawk Indian women from the nearby Caughnawaga reserve were charged with attempted murder Tuesday after two taxi drivers were found beaten and their cars stolen earlier in the day.

Barbara Homer, 28, Sherry Delisle, 19, and Katie McComber, 21, were also charged with conspiracy, robbery and assault with intention of bodily harm.

The charges were laid in connection with a series of violent acts early Tuesday which police in the town of Chateauguay said began in the town and ended at the nearby Indian reserve.

Chateauguay police were quick to say they believe the violence was in revenge for the fatal shooting on the reserve Saturday of 28-year-old David Cross by a Quebec provincial policeman.

A statement from Quebec provincial police blamed "marginal and radical elements" for the trouble. And a Montreal police statement said two men, possibly Americans, threatened to kill two suburban policemen on the reserve Tuesday.

But Indian leaders at the reserve said they believe there is no connection between the events Tuesday and the Saturday slaying in which Cross, armed with a broken pool cue, was shot three times from point-blank range.

They said police are trying to divert attention from the slaying.

The Tuesday trouble began when a taxi driver was hailed outside a Chateauguay hotel and then beaten with blackjacks, police there said.

The man was dumped beside the road with a broken nose and a serious eye injury, police said. The attackers then drove to the reserve and set the car on fire.

Montreal police said the attackers later stole another taxi and robbed the driver of $20 before beating him and leaving him in a wooded area in suburban LaSalle, located across the St. Lawrence River from Caughnawaga. The driver is in serious condition in hospital.

Police said a Montreal police cruiser chased the taxi to the reserve and when the constables stopped the car to make arrests they were threatened with a rifle and a knife by two men in a car with Michigan licence plates.

Then two men from the reserve's peace-keeping force arrived with "a number of other residents of Caughnawaga" armed with an assortment of guns, Montreal police added.

Paul Deer, head of the reserve's force, said he was shocked by the police accusations.

Deficit to reach $10B?

OTTAWA (UPC) — International Trade Minister Michael Wilson has warned that Canada's balance of payments deficit could rise to a record $10 billion next year because of the business environment created by government.

Speaking to leading businessmen at the annual meeting of the Canadian Export Association, Wilson said Tuesday that Canada has a surplus in merchandise trade but a heavy deficit in items such as interest and dividends.

"We have . . . been experiencing chronic balance of payments deficit on current account," said Wilson. "Last year the deficit amounted to $5.3 billion. This year's estimate puts the deficit at over $7 billion.

"It has been suggested to me that next year's deficits may reach $10 billion."

Wilson said the problem was not the fault of exporters but reflected the general business environment created by the government. The role that government should play in assisting exporters was under review, he said.

Ottawa wants to reduce its role and put the emphasis on the private sector, he said. The trade department now has 27 studies underway that could reduce the deficit situation.

"In none of these areas are the solutions as clear as the problem," he said, adding that the problems could be solved through "further reliance on private sector expertise."

Industry, Trade and Commerce Minister Robert de Cotret, Wilson's superior in cabinet, told Canadian companies early in the week not to expect the federal government to drum up business.

"The days of the boy scout are over," de Cotret told a meeting. "Business has to become more aggressive. We will support your efforts but we will not make them for you."

The Conservative administration would find it difficult to "get out of private business if business keeps coming asking for a crutch," de Cotret said.

"It worries me that not one businessman or industry has said they can get along with less government aid. If you hold out your hands for payment you will find that you will have to pay for it."

$7B gov't loan opposed

OTTAWA (CP) — Opposition MPs stalled approval in principle Tuesday of a bill to give the government power to borrow an additional $7 billion during the current fiscal year.

Liberals and New Democrats took turns accusing the Conservatives of abandoning election promises and foresaking the economic policies they advanced during their years in opposition.

And they blasted the government anew for not recalling Parliament soon after the May 22 election and for delaying its first budget until late next month.

Government House Leader Walter Baker accused the Liberals of obstructing legislation that had been proposed by their government in the last Parliament — "It's like hitting your mother."

Crosbie told the Commons Tuesday that the government needs to borrow up to $7 billion more this year to meet its needs during the fiscal year that ends March 31.

The previous Liberal government had asked for permission to borrow $10 billion, but Crosbie said $7 billion should be sufficient to finish out the year because the government had made use of unused borrowing authority in months past.

However, Liberal finance critic Herb Gray (Windsor West) said his own calculations showed that the $7 billion would give the government borrowing authority equivalent to $13.5 billion this year — $3.5 billion more than the Liberals had anticipated.

Gray said the Conservatives presumably want this extra cushion because they fear slower economic growth or because they plan to prop up the Canadian dollar on international money markets.

Trudeau to go, says Newman

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — Peter Newman, editor of Maclean's magazine, has predicted a change in the leadership of the federal Liberal party, the possible disappearence of the party as a political power and the defeat of the independence referendum in Quebec.

"The Trudeau reign is really over," Newman told the Women's Canadian Club on Tuesday. "It's just a matter of picking the date. But he'll wait until after the referendum."

The Liberal party "is the sick man of Canadian politics and there is danger the illness will become terminal."

"And that would be too bad because we need a party in the centre."

Quebec residents will vote to remain within Confederation, Newman said.

"Most people don't remember that 60 per cent of the people of Quebec rejected (Quebec Premier Rene) Levesque. He only received about 40 per cent of the vote in the election."

He said Trudeau will play an important role in the referendum because a Gallup poll has shown Quebecers about evenly divided in their preferences for both L. esque and Trudeau.

Small business tax eased

OTTAWA (CP) — Finance Minister John Crosbie stepped back from the get-tough stance of the previous Liberal government Tuesday, announcing a new tax plan for many types of small businesses.

His plan modifies a budget measure introduced last fall by former finance minister Jean Chretien disqualifying many groups and individuals from tax breaks available when they incorporated themselves as small businesses.

Chretien was convinced that professionals, athletes and others should have to pay the full tax rate of 46 to 51 per cent.

Crosbie is prepared to take a more lenient approach. He tabled a proposal in the House calling for a special small business tax rate of 33.3 per cent affecting this group.

The standard small business tax rate is 25 per cent.

The new intermediate tax rate would be available to small businesses providing professional, personal or management services.

It would cover incorporated dentists, lawyers, accountants, veterinarians, chiropractors, athletes, consultants and others.

In a news release announcing his plan, Crosbie said the government had reviewed the Liberal measure in light of a barrage of criticism it received and decided it had to be modified.

The new system will be put into place in the 1979 taxatvon year, Crosbie announced.

One of Crosbie's first promises as finance minister was to enact most of Chretien's budget as soon as possible once the House was in session.

"Most of the measures that will be included in the legislation are measures that we have no choice but to continue since the Canadian people have been conducting their affairs since Nov. 16 on the basis that the budget provisions brought down that evening were effective at that date," the minister told reporters in mid-summer.

The major budget measures to which Crosbie was referring were:

—An increase in the maximum amount taxpayers could deduct from their 1978 and subsequent tax returns to $500 from the previous $250 limit.

—Reduction of the federal sales tax (which affects the price at which manufacturers sell their goods to wholesalers and retailers) to nine per cent from 12 per cent, effective Nov. 17.

—The closing of a tax loophole which allowed the banks to offer corporations cheap loans by using the tax-exempt mechanism of income debentures and term preferred shares.

—Extention of the federal investment tax credit plan, designed to promote industrial expansion and modernizatvon, beyond its scheduled expiry date of June 30, 1980.

—Enrichment of government incentives to industries prepared to locate in slow-growth areas and willing to increase their research spending.

Malone sentenced

WINNIPEG (CP) — Richard C. Malone, former publisher of The Free Press, was sentenced Tuesday to a year in jail on a charge of attempting to obstruct justice and lesser terms to be served concurrently for gross indecency and buggery.

Malone, 38, had pleaded guilty earlier to buggery and attempting to obstruct justice and was found guilty Oct. 2 of two charges of gross indecency involving juvenile males.

He was sentenced to one year on the attempted obstruction charge, six months concurrent on one count of gross indecency, one month on the other and one month on the charge of buggery.

Judge Arnold Conner said it wasn't likely that Malone would become involved again with the law, but he said a jail sentence was needed to serve as a deterrent.

The judge was particularly severe in referring to the obstruction-of justice charge.

"No other measure (but a jail term) would adequately express the condemnation of society," Conner said, taking into account that Malone had studied law at university and was called to the bar although he did not practise.

Malone said he was sorry for what had happened.

"I apologize to my family for the very real anguish that these events have caused them," he said. "I also wish to apologize to my friends and former business associates for the embarassment and disappointment I'm sure I have been to them."

Thief says he's sorry

EDMONTON (CP) — An Edmonton photo finishing shop was robbed by a thief who apologized profusely for being forced to steal, provincial court was told Tuesday.

Court was told Michael James Windsor, 17, who pleaded guilty to armed robbery, felt he had no other choice — he was broke, hungry and needed to support his mother who is dying of cancer.

A man walked into the shop and when the clerk hesitated to hand over any money, the thief pulled a knife and said: "I'm sorry, but I really need the money."

Judge George Forbes reserved decision until Oct. 29.

Fighter decision delay urged

OTTAWA (CP) — Serious questions about the value and effectiveness of two United States fighter aircraft being considered for the Canadian Armed Forces were raised Tuesday.

As a result of them Judd Buchanan, Liberal defence critic, called for a six-month delay in choosing a fighter — at a cost of $2.3 billion — while all aspects of the situation are considered.

But Defence Minister Allan McKinnon, rejecting some of Buchanan's arguments about industrial benefits to Canada, reconfirmed that he hopes to choose between the General Dynamics F-16 and the McDonnell Douglas F-18A by the end of the year.

Buchanan raised the mattec in the Commons because of a U.S. Congressman's statements in Washington strongly criticizing the "right disastrous situation" involving engine troubles of the F-15s and F-16s being delivered to U.S. armed forces.

Jack Edwards of Alabama, leading Republican on the appropriations defence sub-committee in the House of Representatives, said problems with the Pratt and Whitney engines of the planes are an embarrassment to the U.S. Air Force.

Buchanan said there also are troubles with the F-18A. It was experiencing trouble reaching its proper range and is suffering cost overruns. It is being built for the U.S. Navy.

There have been reports that the F-16 is not really in the competition and that the government has virtually decided upon the F-18A.

McKinnon has denied those reports. He told Buchanan in the Commons Tuesday that there is real competition and each company has offered a good industrial package for Canada.

McKinnon will receive a report shortly from Brig.-Gen. Paul Manson who headed an inter-departmental group which studied the submissions of all aircraft corporations.

Striking policemen settle

TRURO, N.S. (CP) — Truro policemen settled early today on a new three year contract that ended the strike begun last Friday and which will give them a wage of $18,500 annually by the contract expiry in 1981.

The settlement leaves Amherst and New Glasgow policemen on strike in the province but Joe Ross, executive director of the Police Association of Nova Scotia, said he hoped for quick settlement of the two other disputes.

The bargaining table agreement was ratified immediately at a membership meeting attended by 22 of the 24 police association members in Truro. Two were out of the province. The exact result of the vote was not released but it was not unaminous.

UAW still out despite pact

TORONTO (CP) — Workers remained off the job today at Ford Motor Co. of Canada Ltd. plants in Oakville, Ont., and St. Thomas, Ont., despite a tentative agreement reached at about 2:30 a.m. between the company and 15,000 members of the United Auto Workers union.

Ford spokesman Tony Fredo said the company understood that union negotiators had asked employees to return to work but there may have been some confusion among employees because the settlement was reached after the midnight deadline set by the union.

"As far as we know we have a national tentative agreement and the union is in the process of organizing a ratification vote," he said.

But a union spokesman in St. Thomas said workers there are still on strike and they want local issues resolved before they return to work.

"The agreement hasn't been ratified," he said. "We are still on a legal strike and discipline and other local issues will have to be resolved before we go back to work."

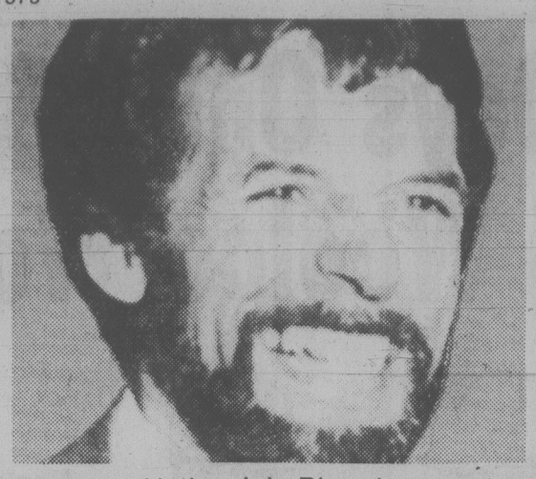
He said a ratification vote by workers at the plant will be held Sunday.

The proposed three-year agreement would be retroactive.

Robert White, UAW Canadian director, told a news conference the agreement was similar to one reached by the union and General Motors of Canada Ltd. earlier this month for wages, pension benefits and cost-of-living allowances.

White said ratification votes are scheduled for Sunday at the Ford plants in five Ontario centres. The workers have been without a contract since Sept. 14.

Although a master agreement is resolved, White said, negotiations are to continue today on local issues, some involving workers at two Oakville plants and the Talbotville plant near St. Thomas.



Union Nationale's Biron bows out

New party for Quebec

QUEBEC (CP) — The Union Nationale party will hold a founding convention for a new Quebec party uniting all right-wing groups in the province after the referendum on Quebec independence next spring.

UN leader Rodrigue Biron told a news conference today that he "will probably not be a candidate" for the new party and it will be up to delegates at the founding meting to decide on the party name.

Biron, who has led the party since the spring of 1976, said the only condition members of the prospective party must meet is that they be "right wingers," adding that he wants to unite "all the forces of the right in Quebec."

He defined right-wingers as those who believe in private initiative, oppose the right to strike in the public sector and are against big government.

He said he has contacted Camil Samson, head of a right-wing splinter group called the Democrats, and independent members of the national assembly Bill Shaw and Rodrigue Tremblay.

Tremblay, who was industry and commerce minister until Premier Rene Levesque announced a cabinet shuffle last month, attended a Union Nationale caucus meeting today, Biron added.

Prime Minister Clark was informed of the initiative, he said, because the federal Conservatives are considering establishing a provincial wing of the party in Quebec.

Maurice Bellemare, Union Nationale House Leader, has asked for a week to think about the move, which will mean the disappearance of the Union Nationale.

The party was wiped out in the 1973 election, when it ran under the name Unite-Quebec.

B.C. wants more say on oil prices

By PAUL NICHOLSON

B.C. has been shuffled into the background during recent talks between Alberta, Ontario and the federal government over looming domestic oil price increases, and Energy Minister Jim Hewitt doesn't like it.

At a press conference today Hewitt said all provinces and not just Ontario share concerns about the social and economic impact of a $4-per-barrel increase proposed by Alberta.

Hewitt said he made his position clear at a conference of Canadian energy ministers in Calgary earlier this week.

"I am waiting to see which way Ottawa will now move, but one thing is clear from the Calgary meeting — the whole matter of energy pricing is too big for Ottawa, Alberta and Ontario to be discussing by themselves.

"All provinces must be involved before any decisions are made, and I have made it clear that we expect further consultation," Hewitt said.

Hewitt reiterated that B.C. does not oppose increases as long all provinces agree to a formula that will ensure the majority of the windfall does not go into Alberta's heritage fund.

Ottawa, Ontario and Alberta have been meeting in recent weeks to try and hammer out a new formula for implementing the increases and where the extra revenue should go.

Hewitt said the existing formula must be changed.

Any increase under the current formula would see some of the excess revenues go to the oil companies.

The federal governmnt would get little more revenue from taxes, but most of the profit would fall into the Alberta goverment's hands.

"That is unaccceptable to us," Hewitt said.

The minister said he wants some funds to go into social programs to offset the inflationary consequences of a price hike, especially for people with low or fixed incomes.

And much more money must be turned over to the oil companies to encourage increased exploration and to inspire the search for developing other, more expensive energy alternatives.

"B.C. is an oil consuming province and currently imports 75 per cent of its oil requirements from Alberta," Hewitt said.

"Any price increases will hit us hard and we want to know the full details of Ottawa's proposals before we can agree with them."

A $4-per-barrel increase in the wellhead price of oil would add about 15 cents to the cost of a gallon of gasoline and a proportional increase to the price of home heating fuel.

Townsend heads NDP

Gordon Townsend, the man whose name was used by Socred supporters in a "dirty-trick" letters-to-the-editor campaign before the last provincial election, was elected Monday night president of the federal New Democratic Party in the Esquimalt-Saanich riding.

Also elected were Ian Taylor, first vice-president, Elaine Pilon, second vice-president, and Dick Belfit, Bill Smith, Fred Callender and Sally Chaster, the four members-at-large.

Two won't run again for school board

Two of four Sooke school trustees whose terms expire this year have decided not to run again.

Noel Pemberton-Billing, who served six years on the board, and Bill Stephenson, with 12 years, are retiring.

Pauline Chamberlain has filed nomination papers for the Nov. 17 election and is the only person to have done so with 2½ days left to deadline at noon Monday.

Still uncertain is the fourth trustee, Camosun College teacher Brian Killip.

"I want to give my family some of my time," said Pemberton-Billing, who runs a boarding kennel business.

Stephenson, an accountant who has been in community service since 1949, feels it is time someone else has an opportunity to give time to the board.

Teacher absenteeism astonishes trustee

Teacher absenteeism last year in the Sooke School District due to illness averaged 6.9 days or 3.4 per cent of the 195-day teaching year.

The figures were contained in a report received Tuesday by trustees.

An education ministry guideline suggests 2 per cent absenteeism should be allowed for illness.

Trustee Noel Pemberton-Billing expressed astonishment at what she said was the high rate of absence among the 427 teachers in the district.

She noted the B.C. Teachers' Federation ranks teaching second only to air traffic controlling in stress-producing pressure.

"Teachers of today's society have almost to be superhuman," she said.

The report, initiated at the request of the education ministry, gave no explanation for the situation.

"When I looked at the figures I would have thought a high proportion of female teachers had come down with the flu," Pemberton-Billing said.

Males averaged 5.8 days during the year, females eight days.

Why build when prices and interest rates are so high? Why not go for our 33 suites with only $80,000 cash required and interest rate on the balance of 10½%. This building has a vacancy rate that is minimal and has a new furnace and is partly furnished. Good views and close to shopping and convenient bus — ample parking and well equipped. Full price $519,000, less than $16,000 per apt., (compare that with the accelerating building costs today).
ALSO:
and for a little larger investment you can add this 4 plex to go with the above making a complex of 37 apts. on 4 lots. And this last only requires $20,000 cash and $75,000 mortgaging at 10½% — full price $95,000 (scarcely more than a duplex), owner anxious to retire only reason for selling. And the four-plex will have a new 20 year roof.

Amin waiting in wings

NAIROBI, Kenya (UPI) — Six months after he fled Uganda in fear for his life, deposed dictator Idi Amin is waiting in the wings in northern Africa, convinced he will return a conquering hero, according to diplomatic reports.

Amin lives in uneasy if luxurious exile in Libya, a not entirely welcome guest of his one-time ally and military benefactor, Col. Moammar Khadafy. He is surrounded by two wives, numerous children, relatives and hangers-on.

First from a sumptuous hotel room overlooking Libya's Mediterranean beaches but now from a secret "hideaway" deep in the desert, Amin reputedly monitors events in Uganda daily.

Reliable reports say he has become obsessed with plans to stage a triumphant return to his still-embattled homeland, a nation he virtually destroyed during his eight-year rule of terror.

Amin awaits chance to take power

The continuing chaos inside Uganda has sustained Amin in his belief he could successfully mount a counter-coup.

Though some 20,000 Tanzanian troops remain in Uganda, law and order is non-existent. As many as 25 persons are killed daily in Kampala, the capital, by gangs of ermed thugs.

President Godfrey Binaisa remains in office on the whim of Tanzanian President Julius Nyerere.

There is no government control in the provinces and little headway has been made in reviving the once-prosperous economy Amin destroyed.

When he fled Uganda after Kampala fell last April, Amin vowed to fight on and reclaim the city.

For several weeks he toured Arab states, including Iraq and Syria, seeking funds and military equipment to rally his dispersed army and launch a counterattack against the Tanzanian army which swept him from power.

He was rebuffed and flew to Libya where Khadafy — embarrassed by the humiliating retreat of his own troops from Uganda when they tried to prop up Amin — placed him and his wives and family in seclusion.

In that sense, he is more prisoner than guest.

But Uganda experts believe the 54-year-old former boxer and British colonial army sergeant-major eventually will tire of his lonely exile and try to return to Uganda.

Syrian torture deaths cited

LONDON (AP) — Amnesty International said today political prisoners in Syria are held in prolonged detention without trial and at least nine have died from the effects of torture.

The London-based human rights organization said that under interrogation, and sometimes as punishment, prisoners have been beaten and whipped, burned with cigarette lighters, had gasoline poured over their bodies and set alight, heard the sounds of simulated executions, been immersed to the point of near asphyxiation and given electric shocks on their genitals.

Amnesty International said in a 16-page paper that political prisoners often are held in wretched, overcrowded conditions and are denied fair and open hearings because trials by the country's state security court are routinely held in secret.

The organization estimated the total number of untried political detainees is at least 350 at any one time and on occasions has risen to nearly 1,000. It said some prisoners have been detained without trial for more than eight years.

The paper said those detained for political opposition include adherents of the fundamentalist Moslem Brotherhood, members of breakaway movements within the ruling Ba'ath party, supporters of policies promoted by the late Egyptian President Abdel Gamal Nasser under the Egyptian-Syrian union of 1958-61, as well as Marxists, Kurds and Palestinians.

An Amnesty International official said the information in the paper was gathered over three to four years from travellers and specialists on the country, press reports and AI missions to Syria. She said work on compiling the paper began 12 months ago.

$2B loan to support U.S. dollar

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — The federal government today took the latest in a series of actions to shore up the U.S. dollar by announcing it would borrow up to $2.22 billion in marks in West Germany over the next three months.

The marks borrowed by the U.S. Treasury from West German citizens could be used to buy up dollars on world currency markets, making them scarce and thus supporting the dollar's value.

Since a more aggressive dollar support strategy was initiated last November, the treasury has borrowed the equivalent of two billion dollars in marks.

It said it would borrow up to $2.22-billion more through the sale of federal treasury securities in early November and in January.

More on art of cuttings

As cooler weather aids in ripening this year's growth on our commonly grown deciduous shrubs, cuttings can be taken just as their leaves are falling. A percentage, according to skill and luck of the season, will form roots by late April into May.

Cuttings of this kind are known as hardwood cuttings and are not only slower to root than the half-ripened ones taken earlier but also less certain. It is, however, a chance worth taking as it may result in at least two or three new shrubs for the home gardener to grow into specimens for chosen spots.

Through the winter, there is little to do for them except to see that the cuttings are firm in the rooting mixture and not waterlogged.

Rooting can be done in a sandy-humus bed prepared in the floor of a coldframe that can be covered with glass. Or a half dozen of one kind in a one-litre can are put into the shelter of shrubs to protect from north and northeast winter winds.

The warmth of weak winter sun will occasionally warm the soil. Calluses will form on the cut surfaces and from the calluses will produce roots in spring. On some kinds, roots also come from the buried portion of stems at leaf nodes. This is the theory. In practice, a few cuttings may fail because of immaturity. Some that form calluses may have cell tissue that is too hard for roots to break through. Sometimes a callus can be scraped gently with a knife to allow roots to emerge in another week or two.

Hardwood cutting material is different from that taken at other seasons. For these late ones, take pieces eight to 10 inches long and insert to half their length in the mixture of sandy leafsoil or sandy compost. Make the cuttings firm with fingers or small dibber.

If using one-litre juice or other cans, be sure there are three holes punched on the side of each, near the bottom. These are for drainage in winter and early spring, and will not become clogged with soil as do holes in the bottom. A waterlogged soil means a cold soil and delayed rooting action.

Put only one variety of plant cuttings into a container for with the best of intentions it is possible to mix up varietal names in some cases before flowering time as with named varieties of the golden forsythia.

A plant label in each container helps. Print name of plant from which cuttings were taken, date and the number of cuttings. This information, copied into your garden notebook, makes it easier to decide when certain jobs should be done another year.

Shrubs for a beginner to start from hardwood cuttings now, include easy ones like forsythia, the several spiraeas, the yellow Winter-jasmine, privet.

When the cuttings that make spring root growth are set out into a small nursery bed, each with a label, their top growth will in most kinds be doubled in the first season. While small for the first few years compared with the parent plants they will be identical in every feature. On their own new root systems, they will appear healthier.

There may be other shrubs in the garden that you wish to experiment with. This is one means of learning while doing. Your interest in gardening will increase, and so will your understanding of plant values.

When looking over nursery grown plants you will no longer shudder at the price tags, rather you will marvel at the patience, dedication and years of experience which went into the work of production.

There will be admiration for another's work and some little pride at having some knowledge of that work.

Canadians just landscape freaks: artist

LONDON (CP) — Vancouver-born artist Joy Caros says Canadians are close-minded about art and refuse to recognize her artistic achievement.

During a joint exhibition with husband and fellow artist James Rawlings at Hamilton's Art Gallery, Caros said her work, although widely accepted in Europe has won little praise from her native land.

"Unless you're painting something Canadian the country won't look at you as a Canadian artist."

Caros says she is the only contemporary artist in Europe who has "perfected the technique of painting oil on velvet" although there are examples at the Louvre and the Vatican of earlier works in this medium.

"I started painting with oil on velvet 20 years ago because of the challenge. It's difficult and demands patience, there's simply no room for error."

Her subjects are people — nudes, faces and aesthetic figures representing human drama against a black-velvet background.

"I try to convey emotion, feeling and tragedy through the human figure. We are life. Why should I return to Canada and paint landscapes?"

Caros began sculpting and painting more than 20 years ago, earning recognition throughout Canada.

After a one-man show in Toronto in 1963 Hollywood producer Stanley Kramer invited her to paint the portraits of the 13 personages of his film, This Mad, Mad, Mad World.

Caros began travelling extensively and has exhibited all over the world. Her most recent Canadian exhibition was in Victoria in 1977.

This London exhibition, the first for Caros since her London Hilton exhibit in 1968 is a London debut for Rawlings who began painting in 1976.

After meeting Caros, Rawlings, also of Vancouver, began experimenting with sketches and eventually relinquished his contracting business to paint:

"I had never had the slightest artistic inclination but Joy triggered my interest in the oil on velvet technique."

Now living in Gstaad, Switzerland, Caros and Rawlings are planning to return to Canada for a private exhibition in Toronto next May.

Ottawa envoy urges UN halt on N-materials

UNITED NATIONS (CP) — Canada urged the United Nations on Tuesday to work out steps to halt the production of fissionable materials for nuclear weapons as a first step toward disarmament.

The idea of choking off the materials for nuclear weapons, advanced by then-prime minister Pierre Trudeau before the special General Assembly session on disarmament 18 months ago, was raised again by Geoffrey Pearson, Canada's disarmament expert at the UN.

Speaking in the assembly's first committee, Pearson said Canada would like to see talks start on an agreement to stop productinn of the raw materials that go to make nuclear and thermo-nuclear weapons.

"These kind of agreements would help to slow the momentum of weapons development in nuclear weapons states," Pearson said. "They would also make a contribution to the non-proliferation of nuclear weapons."

He said it is regretable that the committee on disarmament, set up following the special session, has not yet begun to work on the details of a comprehensive test ban treaty.

"We believe that concrete action toward a complete ban is necessary soon."

He said published figures indicate there were more nuclear tests last year than in any year since 1970.

Pearson said partial measures of nuclear arms control are preferable to more comprehensive negotiations that have little chance of success.

He also called on the disarmament committee to begin talks on an agreement to ban chemical weapons.

Non-smoker's health threat seen by 58%

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A tobacco industry survey inadvertently made public Tuesday shows 58 per cent of those questioned thought cigarette smoking is dangerous to the health of non-smokers.

The finding was a reversal of an earlier poll in 1974 which showed 48 per cent believed cigarette smoking probably was not injurious to non-smokers.

The Tobacco Institute, the trade association of the tobacco industry, said the latest poll it commissioned was 18 months old.

The survey of 2,500 persons by the Roper Organization Inc. found 58 per cent of those polled thought cigarette smoking probably is hazardous to the health of non-smokers, compared to 46 per cent who thought so in the poll four years earlier. Only 33 per cent, compared to the earlier 48 per cent, believed cigarette smoke was not harmful to non-smokers.

U.K. planning fee squeeze on airlines

LONDON (CP) — The British Airports Authority is planning substantial increases in landing fees, effective next April, in a renewed effort to force airlines such as Air Canada, Iberia, and TAP (Portugal) to shift services from congested Heathrow to Gatwick.

"We're trying to persuade airlines like Air Canada by any means we can to move to Gatwick which is operating at half capacity, instead of staying at Heathrow which is already operating at more than 90 per-cent capacity," authority spokesman David Nicholls said today.

"Gatwick's landing fees have always been lower than Heathrow's and we intend to widen the differential to encourage transfers to Gatwick."

The move follows the British government's recent admission of defeat in the long-running dispute to persuade airlines to move to Gatwick.

Nicholls says moving to Gatwick, although further from London than Heathrow, would allow the airlines to expand services.

"It's impossible for Air Canada to grow if they stay at Heathrow even if it is more convenient for Canadian passengers."

Throughout the battle Air Canada has said most major airlines are at Heathrow and not at Gatwick and it is more convenient for Canadian passengers.

Air Canada spokesmen say the switch to Gatwick would cost the airlines "millions of dollars."

Nicholls says the airport authority is aiming for an over-all 10 per-cent increase in its income from landing fees at the three southeast airports of Heathrow, Gatwick and Stansted but "within that figure Heathrow would bear a significantly higher proportion than the others."

The Gatwick dispute came to a head when Ottawa said talks on British access to Western Canadian airports would have to be delayed until the Gatwick issue was settled.

Earthquake fault evidence threatens Skagit N-project

SEATTLE (UPI) — U.S. Nuclear Regulatory Commission officials say new geologic evidence showing the proposed site for the Skagit Nuclear Project may lie on a potentially dangerous earthquake fault could mean a serious delay for the project, a Seattle newspaper reported Wednesday.

A copyrighted article in the Seattle Post-Intelligencer, NRC officials were quoted as saying the controversial $3.8-billion project is unlikely to get federal approval to start construction before its local zoning permit expires Dec. 31.

"It's looking very unlikely a limited work authorization will be issued. In fact, it's nearly impossible," said NRC attorney Richard Black.

The statements came just one day after a Skagit County Superior Court judge denied a motion filed by Puget Power Sound £ Light Co., the sponsor of the project, to remove a citizens' advisory referendum ballot on the issue from the Nov. 6 general election.

NRC officials said Tuesday the new geological evidence concerns a fault beneath the San Juan Islands, west of the project site near Sedro Woolley on the Skagit River. The fault "trends in the direction of the site," said James Knight, the commission's assistant engineering director.

Aides to U.S. Rep. Al Swift, (Dem-Bellingham), said they had been told the fault is "active" — meaning it could cause earthquakes — by Robert Morris, chief of nuclear site review investigation for the U.S. Geological Survey, the agency which only a few months ago had given the twin-nuclear project a green light.

The Post-Intelligencer said Morris, when contacted, would neither confirm nor deny whether the fault could cause tremors.

Queen sips Burgundy

PARIS (Reuter) — Queen Elizabeth begins a two-day visit to France today, where she will tour the wine growing areas of the Loire Valley and Burgundy, and have dinner with President Valery Giscard d'Estaing.

After arriving at Tours Military Air Base shortly before noon, the Queen will see several Renaissance chateaux in the surrounding Loire region, including the picteresque Chateau de Chenonceaux.

She will dine privately in Paris with the French president tonight at the Elysee Palace.

Pale, drawn Brezhnev appears on Soviet TV

MOSCOW (UPI) — President Leonid Brezhnev, looking pale and drawn, appeared in public today for the first time since Oct. 8 to dispel rumors circling the world that he was dead or critically ill.

The 72-year-old Brezhnev turned up without warning at an airport greeting ceremony for the visiting president of South Yemen, Abdel Fattah Ismail, and was clearly seen in television film footage on Soviet television.

Brezhnev, dressed in a dark blue topcoat and dark hat, looked tired and his face was pale and drawn as he stood at the head of the Soviet delegation at Vnukovo Airport.

But he nodded and smiled as Ismail approached him.

Rumors began circulating last week that Brezhnev was dead or critically ill when he failed to meet with visiting Syrian President Hafez Assad, who came to Moscow to ask for advanced Soviet warplanes and military equipment.

The pro-Syrian newspaper As Safir reported in Beirut that Brezhnev had become seriously ill since returning from Berlin Oct. 8.

With each day that he failed to make an appearance, the rumors — and the Beirut report — appeared to gain strength.

Last Thursday, stock markets in London and Paris began to waver erratically on rumors that Brezhnev had died or was near death.

Since Assad's visit, diplomats in Moscow have hinted that Brezhnev intentionally kept out of sight to avoid having to negotiate — and possibly refuse — Assads request for MiG-27 fighter-bombers.

Begin wins crisis vote

JERUSALEM (AP) — Prime Minister Menachem Begin won his first test in the winter session of the Israeli parliament as predicted Tuesday, defeating a parcel of five no-confidence motions by a 12-vote margin.

The 120-seat Knesset, Israel's parliament, voted 59 to 47 to reject the opposition Labor Party motions charging Begin's government with blundering in its handling of the economy and its policies toward Jewish settlements in the occupied West Bank.

The Knesset voted only on all five motions as a package.

Moshe Dayan, who resigned as foreign minister Sunday because of his inability to modify the government's hard line on Palestinian autonomy, voted with the government as he said he would.

No-confidence motions are a routine occurrence at the opening of Knesset terms, and the Labor Party did not make a major effort to rally support. But Opposition Leader Shimon Peres said in presenting the motions that even though Begin would defeat them, his government had lost the confidence of the people.

The voting attracted more attention than usual because of two government setbacks at the start of the week, Dayan's resignation and a Supreme Court ruling that the seizure of privately-owned Arab land for the Jewish settlement of Elon Moreh in the West Bank was illegal.

Agriculture Minister Ariel Sharon visited Elon Moreh on Tuesday and was told by the settlers they would resist the court order.

Russians may have key to electron-beam energy

By THEODORE SHABAD
New York Times

NEW YORK — The Soviet Union has announced a major advance toward the construction of a demonstration plant for producing a fusion reaction, viewed by many as a promising future energy source.

According to reports in Moscow newspapers that have reached the United States, the Kurchatov Institute of Atomic Energy in the Soviet capital has begun operating the first stage of a giant accelerator that will fire converging high-powered beams of electrons at a tiny pellet of heavy hydrogen to release energy. The machine began working Sept. 30, and the news was officially released Oct. 6.

Electron beams are latecomers to the competition for an economical method of fusion-energy release. The source of energy in existing nuclear power plants is fission, in which large atoms are split; fusion squeezes small atoms to form heavier ones.

Prof. Leonid I. Rudakov, head of the Soviet electron-beam project, known as Angara-5, was quoted by Pravda, the authoritative Soviet Communist Party daily, as having said:

"When it is completed, we hope to obtain a controlled thermonuclear reaction as a result of which the facility will be producing more energy than it consumes. Angara-5 is supposed to demonstrate that an industrial pilot plant can be built."

Rudakov gave no projected timetable for the completion of the installation, which will consist of 48 electron-beam generators arrayed in a circle around the target pellet. A similar facility is being built in the United States at Sandia Laboratories, near Albuquerque, N.M., where the first phase of an accelerator is expected to start operations in about a year.

Both the United States and the Soviet Union have been engaged in a long-term program of investigating a number of competitive techniques for the production of fusion energy. Tentative timetables in the United States look to the early to middle 1980s as a possible time when researchers may achieve a "break-even" point, at which a machine produces as much power as it uses. It may be another decade before a fusion reactor produces more power than it uses, thus opening the way for the actual prodction of electrical energy.

The 30-year-old effort to harness fusion reactions is now being pursued along two basic routes. One is known as magnetic confinement, which uses a magnetic field to confine and compress a hot cloud, or plasma, of fuel to the required density and temperature over a sufficient time to sustain a fusion reaction.

The second route, known as inertial confinement, is based on the very rapid compression and heating of a small target of fuel through bombardment by laser or electron beams to produce fusion of nuclei and release energy.

The fuel in both approaches is a mixture of deuterium, a heavy form of hydrogen that occurs in sea water, and of tritium, an even heavier form of hydrogen generated in reactors.

Soviet experimenters reported three years ago that they had produced the first fusion reaction induced by converging electron beams. The Moscow daily Sotsialisticheskaya Industriya quoted Albert M. Pasechnik, deputy project head, earlier this month as having said that Angara-1, the machine used for the 1976 experiment had served as the basis for the design of the new machine.

"The principle of operation in Angara-5 is exactly the same," he said, "except that the energy of the beam is much greater. We used Angara-1 to check out the focusing of the electron beam to calculate the required power input and to determine the efficiency of the machine. It was, in short, the prototype for the 5."

Pasechnik said the Angara project had been so named by analogy to the Angara River, a mighty Siberian stream that is the single outlet of Lake Baikal, to which a large number of lesser streams contribute their water.

The first module, as the Russians call each of the 48 electron-beam machines of the Angara-5 project, was designed by the Research Institute for Electrophysical Apparatus in Leningrad and was manufactured by the city's Dvigatel (Engine) Plant. Leningrad, with a large reservoir of skilled labor, has traditionally been in the forefront of Soviet technological innovation.

The Soviet press reports indicated that tests on the first module might yield further improvements, but that Leningrad's Elektrosila Plant, a leading manufacturer of power equipment, had already been awarded the contract for serial production of the machines.

'Just clutched their pigs and looked amazed'

LONDON (AP) — An international expedition trekking through a Papua New Guinea jungle claimed Tuesday to have discovered a primitive tribe living in Stone Age conditions.

"We found them after an extremely long and arduous walk," said Roger Chapman, a major in the British army who led a survey group that encountered the tribe living along the Strickland River in the central highlands.

"The were quite friendly," Chapman told the British Broadcasting Corp. in a telephone call from the coastal city of Lae.

"They have fire but the only tool we saw was a steel tomahawk. They got it in barter with another village and it probably originated with some Australian police, who patrolled there before Papua New Guinea became independent."

Chapman said that when he called in an Australian Air Force helicopter to leave, "they were very frightened."

"They just clutched their pigs — their most prized possessions — and looked on amazed as we lifted off."

Chapman described the tribe of 15 or 20 members as agriculturalists who cut down trees to grow crops, then move on after four or five years.

Martin White, a reporter with Britain's domestic news agency Press Association, said in a dispatch from Lae that the tribal area is "renowned for cannibalism" and that nine of the tribesmen had been arrested by local police and charged with cannibalism. He said the accused were being held in the jail of a town called Nomad near their village.

The major said communicating with the tribe was difficult because there are 700 languages in Papua New Guinea. He said talking was a four-language process of English, pidgin and two dialects spoken by the five local carriers accompanying the survey.

Reporting an interview with Chapman in Lae, White said the major understood the tribesmen to say that their visitors were the first white men they had seen and almost the first strangers from outside their own valley.

Marilyn Strathern, a Cambridge University specialist on Papua New Guinea tribes, said she was not surprised at the discovery because there are many small, scattered tribes in the area.

Five rights defenders sentenced

PRAGUE (AP) — Five leaders of the fight for human rights in Czechoslovakia got prison sentences Tuesday ranging from three to five years after a two-day trial on charges of subversion.

The sixth defendant, a Roman Catholic mother of seven children, was freed with a suspended sentence.

Four of the five said they would appeal.

Petr Uhl, 38, who has already served a four-year term for distributing subversive leaflets, got the longest sentence, five years. The prosecution asked for 10, the maximum penalty.

Playwright Vaclav Havel, 43, got 4½ years. He was given a suspended 14-month sentence in 1977 on lesser charges.

The other defendants and their sentences were Vaclav Benda, 33, a former spokesman for the Charter 77 human rights movement, four years; Jiri Dienstbier, 42, a former foreign correspondent, three years; Otta Bednarova, 54, a former journalist and one of the two woman defendants, three years, and Dana Nemcova, the other woman who got a two-year suspended sentence and was put on probation for five years.

All but Benda and Mrs. Nemcova told the court they would appeal.

The six were founding members of the Committee for the Defence of the Unjustly Prosecuted.

Gas rationing passed at last

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House of Representatives approved a new standby gasoline rationing system for the country Tuesday, ending the latest round of bickering that has spanned three congresses and two presidential administrations.

By a 301-to-112 margin, the House accepted a compromise rationing measure. A prime feature of the legislation is a provision giving Congress veto power over implementation of the rationing plan.

The bill sent to the White House gives the president authority to move toward rationing if gasoline or diesel fuel supplies fall 20 per cent and if a shortage seems likely to last at least 30 days.

The Senate approved the measure last week.

Under the bill, a president's rationing order would automatically take effect if neither house disapproved during a 15-day review period.

Ration coupons have already been printed.

Grey Power vs. MD bills

WASHINGTON (AP) — Clutching copies of hospital and doctor bills, 400 elderly activists swarmed over Capitol Hill on Tuesday protesting against what they called outrageous medical expenses.

Their stories included:

— Evelyn Donner Day of Mequon, Wis., who brandished a bill of $25,155.50 for 39 days in the hospital for heart surgery.

— Dorothy Ryan of Youngstown, Ohio, who said the family of a friend who died of a stroke was charged thousands of dollars for "hospital incidentals." She held aloft the total bill that came to $24,000.

— House of Representatives Speaker Thomas O'Neill, who told the group about one of his employees, who complained of dizzy spells and went to a local hospital. Four hours later he was told he had high blood pressure, and presented a bill for $1,150.

— Rachael Doll of York, Pa., who said her husband's medical bills following a heart attack were covered by insurance, but added, "a lot of people don't have the insurance."

What they want is congressional passage of an administration bill that would force most of U.S. hospitals to hold down their expenses or else be slapped with federal mandatory controls on their revenues.

"People are hurting," said Bill Hutton, executive director of the National Council of Senior Citizens.

It won't be an easy fight though. Those wanting controls on hospital revenues are up against medical groups that have poured hundreds of thousands of dollars into the so-far successful drive to stave them off.

A Carter administration bill would set guidelines for increases in hospital expenses and impose mandatory revenue controls on hospitals that fail to keep within them. Under the proposal, federal controls could be triggered early next year.

That bill, which is expected to go to the floor of the House of Representatives in the next two weeks, would bar hospitals from buying excessive amounts of expensive equipment. But the hospital industry argues that such restrictions would impair the quality of care it can give to patients.

The American Hospital Association says the average cost for a patient in the hospital one day is $200. It said the average hospital bill for a patient is $1,474.21.

Uniroyal tires of legal battle

WASHINGTON (UPI) — About 750 women who are former or current Uniroyal workers will be getting $5.2 million in back pay from their employer in settlement of a sex discrimination suit.

The payment is being made by Uniroyal to help settle the case that had prevented the firm from being awarded government contracts. The agreement makes Uniroyal eligible for government contracts again.

IRA killer stalked princess

Actor Gil Gerard with Princess Margaret at Rolls site

'Lord Louis suspect' foiled in L.A.

Times News Services

LOS ANGELES — An Irish Republican Army terrorist — a suspect in the killing of Lord Louis Mountbatten — stalked Princess Margaret when she visited Los Angeles last week, triggering a massive, secret operation to guard her, it was reported today.

A tip from Scotland yard that the gunman was in the city sent law enforcement officers from both nations into "a controlled frenzy" on Oct. 17 just 27 hours before Princess Margaret's jet landed, the Los Angeles Times said.

Security efforts redoubled when officers of the Los Angeles police intelligence unit discovered the potential assassin was trying to obtain a floor plan of a Rolls-Royce dealership where the princess was scheduled to dedicate a new service facility, the Times reported.

The IRA man, not publicly identified, and two accomplices apparently realized security forces were on their trail and escaped.

He was described by Scotland Yard as "a high-ranking member of the IRA" provisional wing, and "a suspect in the August boat-bombing murder of Lord Mountbatten," the princess's uncle, the newspaper reported.

A West Los Angeles motor inn was the suspect's headquarters for a week, and a two-man movie crew was recruited as an innocent, unknowing cover. The assassination site appeared to be a Rolls-Royce service facility in nearby Culver City, Calif., which Princess Margaret dedicated Friday.

Capt. Larry Kramer, commander of the police department's security operations for the visit, theorizes now that the IRA agent and his local accomplice learned that word of their plans had leaked and aborted their attempt on Princess Margaret, then hurriedly left California.

Kramer said the intelligence, passed to him from Scotland Yard by the State Department, named and described the suspected assassin, and a routine check of local police records showed that the man had been in Los Angeles before. His police file here yielded a vital photograph.

Last Wednesday, Tony Thompson, president of Rolls-Royce of Beverly Hills, told Walt Deering, assistant agent-in charge of State Department security in Los Angeles, that he had received an odd call from a person who said he represented a movie company assigned by Rolls-Royce to film Princess Margaret's visit to the facility. The caller asked Thompson for a floor plan of his new building.

Thompson referred his caller to Jerry Pam, a Beverly Hills public relations man representing the company, who told the man that anybody attending the Rolls-Royce reception would have to be accredited by the British Consulate-General or cleared by the State Department.

When the film company representative called the State Department, a meeting was set up to discuss "the movie." Police intelligence officers kept that date.

The man who had made the phone calls and a business associate were able to prove that they were legitimate, albeit new, movie producers.

Two weeks earlier, they explained to officers, they met a man in a Beverly Hills bar who said he was representing an international film-maker who wanted to shoot a documentary of Princess Margaret's visit to the Rolls-Royce facility.

They agreed on a price and, at the man's request, said they would obtain a floor plan or a sketch of the service area to guide the positioning of lights and cameras.

The film-makers named the motel in West Los Angeles where their contact was staying.

Motel employees told police that the man and a male companion had checked out Tuesday, the day before Princess Margaret's arrival. From photographs, Kramer said motel employees "positively identified" the companion as the IRA suspect.

Kramer now believes the IRA agent and his accomplice aborted their plan after learning of contacts between the State Department and the film-makers. But at the time there was no proof that the would-be assassin had not simply switched hideouts or swung to a backup plan.

So the planned small motorcades during the royal visit were strengthened to include 13 motorcycle officers and 11 cars, a helicopter constantly patrolled overhead, the reception at the Rolls-Royce dedication was moved indoors and Princess Margaret used a bulletproof Cadillac instead of a promotional Rolls as planned.

In Dublin, meanwhile, Irish Justice Minister Gerard Collins said Tuesday that the outlawed Irish Republican Army has links with Italy's Red Brigades and West Germany's Baader-Meinhof gang.

Collins spoke with reporters after presiding at a meeting attended by justice ministers of the nine-member European Common Market.

He said he had chosen his words carefully and declined to elaborate on what evidence the the ministers have of such links.

Secret study urges major pension rise

MONTREAL (CP) — A confidential government study recommends a major boost in Canadian pensions, according to a story in Le Devoir.

Increases in old age security and income supplements should be tied to increases in average earnings in the country, the newspaper says in a front-page report today from Ottawa.

The study recommends pensions should pay 40 to 45 per cent of the national average salary of $14,000. It says pensioners are currently paid an average 34 per cent ($4,810) of the average salary.

The cost of tying old age security and income supplement payments to salary increases is estimated at $100 million.

Another $200 million would go to new benefits for single people over 65 years old who live in poverty.

The newspaper says the study, prepared by the finance and health and welfare departments, recommends that either pensions be made compulsory for all businesses or that government pension plans be enlarged.

It says only half the employees in the private sector currently pay into private pension plans.

The study also recommends employers be obliged periodically to re-adjust pensions to former employees based on earnings of pension fund investments. It says employees should be able to withdraw pension fund contributions, including those of the company, earlier.

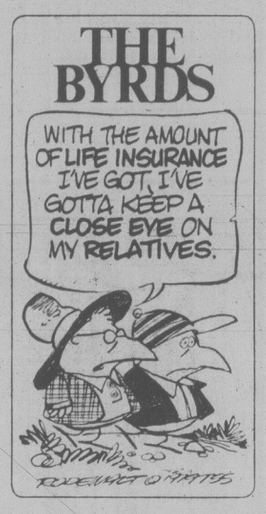
Interest rate hike coming?

OTTAWA (CP) — Sinclair Stevens, treasury board president, indicated today that interest rates could rise following the increase Tuesday in the prime rate of several United States banks.

"This brings added pressure in a North American sense on our interest rates and we can't give assurance that interest rates will not be going higher in Canada," Stevens said in the Commons.

Canadian interest rates are already at record levels. Several American banks announced Tuesday that they are raising their prime lending rate to 15 per cent. This is the rate at which money is loaned to banks' most creditworthy customers.

Stevens' statement was prompted by Herb Gray, Liberal finance critic, who demanded that the government promise further interest rate increases will not occur.



Earnings up 62% for M-B

VANCOUVER (CP) — MacMillan Bloedel Ltd. announced Tuesday its earnings in the first nine months of 1979 totalled $118.3 million, up 62 per cent from the $72.9 million earned in the same period a year ago.

The return is $5.37 a common share, compared with $3.25 a share in 1978.

Company president Calvert Knudsen made the announcement in a Toronto speech in which he said earnings in the third quarter were hurt by strikes and hit-and-run walkouts in British Columbia and a lengthy strike at the MacMillan Rothesay newsprint mill in Saint John, N.B.

In B.C., a new forest industry contract was settled in the third quarter without a major shutdown but all of the company's mills in the province were shut down at one time or another due to picketing by a small number of employees.

Third-quarter earnings amounted to $27.8 million,, compared with $28.8 million a year ago.

Knudsen said all B.C. facilities are now back in operation.

Air safety fears grow

Concern about air safety mounted today — not least in plane-crash-prone British Columbia — as the full-scale national radio operators entered its second day.

There have been at least 40 separate incidents in Western Canada involving air safety since radio operators went on strike, the Public Service Alliance of Canada (PSAC) said Tuesday.

The union also said there had been numerous reports of air regulation infractions, including pilots taking off in the dark.

In Quesnel, a pilot was forced to land in the dark at his own risk because airport lights were not turned on. He was carrying a patient needing medical treatment.

The radio operators are responsible for flight planning, weather and navigation aids and operations in control towers when controllers are off duty.

They are vital to smaller airports where pilots depend on them for landing and take-off information.

About 1,200 air and marine radio operators went on a full-scale strike across the country Tuesday after more than a week of rotating walkouts to back contract demands. Of these, 206 operators are stationed in B.C.

Talks between federal government negotiators and the union resumed briefly Tuesday for the first time since June. Both sides agreed to meet again later this week.

The radio operators have been without a contract for 1½ years.

Unsettled fall weather was the big worry in B.C., where the weather information relayed by radio ops is especially vital to navigation.

Gale warnings were posted for Georgia Strait today with wind and rain expected along the coast for the next few days.

CP Air and Pacific Western Airlines, said Tuesday flights to Quesnel, Terrace, Prince Rupert and Watson lake had been cancelled.

Passengers hoping to get on Tuesday afternoon's CP Air flight from Prince Rupert to Vancouver must have thought they were on a merry-go-round.

With a strike by air-radio operators closing Prince Rupert airport, Vancouver-bound passengers were taken by bus to the Terrace-Kitimat airport, 158 kilometres east.

They arrived to find that cloud and fog had scrubbed flights from that airport.

CP Air then decided to land its inbound flight from Vancouver in Prince Rupert, despite the strike. That meant the travellers had to board the bus once again for the two-hour trip back to Prince Rupert.

That's where the game of musical airplanes ended. Passengers left for Vancouver with a four-hour scenic tour of northwest B.C. under their belts, compliments of CP Air.

Posh Rideau Club fire bedazzles thousands

OTTAWA (CP) — Fire Tuesday destroyed the Rideau Club and damaged the Langevin Block which houses the prime minister's office before a bedazzled audience of thousands gathered on Parliament Hill to watch the spectacular blaze.

The fire engulfed the 68-year-old club, a bastion of Victorian exclusiveness, minutes after the alarm at 5:17 p.m. EDT. None of the 12 injuries among the more than 50 firemen who fought the blaze was considered serious.

Heat and smoke buildup is believed to have caused a massive explosion as the interior walls of the second floor gave way. Firemen were forced to retreat from their ladders as the flames broke through the roof.

Former Gov.-Gen. Roland Michener, the only club member in the building, escaped with staff after smoke was discovered coming from the basement. A dinner for Gov.-Gen. Ed Schreyer was scheduled for Nov. 29.

Firemen fought late into the night to contain a blaze on the roof of the Langevin Block after sparks leaped across the street between the two buildings. Completed in 1889 and named for Father of Confederation Hector-Louis Langevin, the building houses Prime Minister Clark's office and cabinet staff.

Clark was not in the building as smoke and then flames forced staff busy salvaging valuable documents to evacuate. The government spent more than $4 million in 1976-77 to renovate the building which now has fire damage to half the roof and fourth floor and extensive smoke damage.

Motorists nailed for parking illegally as of today will pay a stiff price.

Fines for motorists who park their cars in a number of restricted zones in the city of Victoria went up to $10 from $3.

Anyone who leaves his vehicle illegally in zones marked exclusively for residential parking, trucks, bus stops, hotels, taxis, safety zones near corner and next to hooded parking meters is also liable to have his car towed away.

Fines for this offence used to be $3 but the city traffic department said it wasn't deterring motorists from illegal parking, and the problem had become so severe it was causing extensive double parking in the downtown core.

Trucks, buses and construction vehicles couldn't get into their special zones and had to stop in the street, causing critical congestion and hazards to pedestrians and traffic.

The $3 tickets issued for "yellow line infractions" — parking next to yellow-painted curbs — also climbed to $10 today.

Driveways were being blocked downtown and drivers' visibility obstructed becase of this form of illegal parking, the department said.

Judge finds jail a cold, cold place

BURNABY (CP) — A judge who spent two days last week living like a convict in Oakalla prison describes the jail as a cold, hostile place which is not likely to rehabilitate offenders.

Judge Cunliffe Barnett of Williams Lake, who spent his time in the maximum security remand at the suburban Vancouver prison, called the institution hopelessly outdated, old and dirty.

He and magistrate Roger Kimmerly of Whitehorse went into the prison on an invitation extended by the corrections department during a seminar of provincial court judges. Kimmerly was placed among the general prison population.

"It is a cold, hostile environment," said Barnett. "I think you could go in there completely clean and come out with an intense dislike for authority in a short space of time."

Barnett stressed that he is not advocating the closure of all jails but said that the Oakalla institution has no part in the corrections system today.

He said it is often heard that judges send people to jail to be rehabilitated.

"When you get inside you see it is not an environment where this is going to happen," said Barnett. "Everything that happens is going in the other direction.

"For one thing, that's just not likely to happen in an atmosphere as tense as hostile as Oakalla's."

Barnett said he found it frightening that he discovered himself disliking the relationship between the prisoners and their guards.

He added that he was not faulting the guards, but that it was the atmosphere of the jail.

He said he now has a clearer picture of what prisons are like.

Although prisons are a difficult place to work, Barnett said he found morale among the correctional staff "surprisingly high."

But the impersonal and dehumanizing atmosphere must eventually have an effect on the guards who were in charge of a difficult group of prisoners in maximum security, he said.

One of the worst features was that prisoners have little to do and walk about like caged animals "building up emotions that are bound to erupt."

Barnett said prisoners must find something to occupy their time.

The judge said while in the remand centre he confronted someone he knew.

"I put him there."

The man looked at him, seemed surprised, and then asked: "What did you do?"

Shah loses bladder

NEW YORK (UPI) — Doctors today removed the gall bladder of the cancer-stricken shah of Iran in exploratory surgery to determine the extent of his disease, which is called lymphoma.

Robert Armao, the American spokesman for the shah, said a team of surgeons removed the gall bladder in a 2½-hour operation and also took a biopsy of lymph nodes in the monarch's neck.

"Recovery is anticipated if there are no complications," Armao said. "I can't get into technical aspects."

He said the shah had been suffering from lymphoma for about six years and had been undergoing treatment from a team of French doctors. He said the condition had not been disclosed previously because "it was not in the best interests of Iran."

Airport insurance sought

VANCOUVER (CP) — A new organization is going to be established by the British Columbia Aviation Council to help buy bulk insurance for small, municipally-operated airports.

Until 1978, many smaller airports operated without adequate liability coverage, but they were forced to review their insurance after the crash of a Pacific Western Airlines Boeing 737 at Cranbrook in February that year.

Forty-three people died in the crash and within weeks damage suits totalling over $100 million had been filed by relatives.

Cranbrook had taken out no specific insurance cover for its airport operation and had only a general $500,000 "catch-all" policy.

The aviation council now will assist small airports in securing adequate insurance coverage at discount prices which reduce premiums by 25 per cent.

MPs and senators continued debate on government financial problems.

Adjacent to but upwind of the blazing club, the U.S. embassy was evacuated and incurred smoke and water damage. Stores along the Sparks Street shopping mall behind the club were flooded. A worker in a branch of Henry Birks jewellery store said the basement was awash in 50 centimetres of water.

The Rideau Club was founded in 1865 by rich Ottawans led by Sir John A. Macdonald. The club has counted prime ministers, Governors-General and royalty among its members.

The club became a bulwark of stately traditions, including a wine and cigar committee and rulings which reprimanded stewards for talking politics or members who stayed too late.

The most controversial of its hallowed traditions fell in painful stages as its all-male aspect slowly crumpled.

Although members had discussed allowing women inside their building from about 1900, it wasn't until 1922 that a separate dining room was built for them — they were not permitted in any other part of the club — and not until 1933 that they were allowed to stay after 7 p.m.

The denouement came, though, just two months ago when Jean Pigott — former MP for Ottawa-Carleton and well-known Ottawa businesswoman — became the first full-fledged woman member of the club.

"I'm sure there will be a lot of gentlemen who'll say I put a jinx on the club," she said when advised of the fire.

The building, worth close to $2.5 million, was covered by insurance, with donated paintings valued at more than $100,000. The original petition to the Governor-General and Queen Victoria to establish the club is believed to have been lost in the fire.
